HITLER OFFERS BRITISH PEACE

Roosevelt Orders New Deal Offensive Against Willkie, McNary Immediately

Wallace Gets Selection As Running Mate

Garner Steps Down After Two Terms as Vice President; Farley Quitting As Chairman of National Democratic Committee.

BULLETIN

CHICAGO—(UP)—James A. Farley today accepted a four-week third term as chairman of the Democratic national committee, and predicted victory for the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket in November. Farley said he would retire Aug. 17 and that a five-member subcommittee headed by Edward J. Flynn of New York would appoint his successor after conferring with President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

By LYLE WILSON
(UP Staff Correspondent)

CHICAGO—Franklin Delano Roosevelt today ordered the New Deal-Democratic party into an immediate offensive against Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential candidate. He had accepted a tradition-shattering third term nomination which, he said, he had hoped earnestly to avoid.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, an Iowa New Dealer, was nominated for vice president by Mr. Roosevelt's order. That was the second demonstration of Mr. Roosevelt's power over the Democratic national convention which convened here at noon Monday and adjourned sine die at 1:05 a. m. (EST) today.

The party purge was almost completed today when Wallace was substituted for Vice President John W. Garner who ran with the winning ticket in 1932 and 1936. It will be finished within a few hours when the New Deal drops the pilot, Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic national committee. The committee meets here at 11 a m to reorganize and Farley is stepping down.

It was a rowdy wind-up to four days of stop and go politics in which Farley and a scattering of anti-third term conservatives sought to make a river flow uphill. They lost. The galleries clamored and there were shouts and boos from the floor last night and today as the constricting pressure of White House influence forced the convention steadily toward Wallace, a Republican recruit, for vice president.

The text of President Roosevelt's acceptance speech will be found on Page 6.

It is New Deal vs. the most articulate and adverse critic of the Roosevelt administration that business has produced.

"Had this been a free and open convention—" said Sen. Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) last night in asking that his name be withdrawn from the list of vice presidential contestants. There were others who felt that way about it. But the returns are in, the old line Democrats are out and the 1940 presidential contest is moving toward November.

Wallace sat through it all clutching the speech of acceptance which never was delivered. Mr. Roosevelt needed the minutes Wallace would have required, so the number two man of the third New Deal still has his speech to deliver.

Conference room and platform rebellions blazed through the afternoon and early evening. But Wallace would not stay down. Mr. Roosevelt sent word that he would address the convention at 9 p. m., and then that he would not—unless he got his man. He

Wallace Described as Logical, Serious Man

Vice Presidential Nominee Demonstrates He Will Fight for Ideas.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO—A deadly serious, coldly logical man in his early fifties—one who has demonstrated that he will fight for his ideas no matter how extreme others might think them—was named President Roosevelt's running mate for the coming campaign by the Democratic convention early today.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Agard Wallace was hand picked by the president for the job. He was nominated after party leaders quelled a stubborn revolt staged by Democrats who were irked at the White House dictation of the convention and who bitterly assailed the Iowan as only a newcomer to their party.

President Roosevelt notified the convention that he would be too busy with the duties of his office to conduct a traditional American campaign—so Wallace must be the one to make the swings through the country in the vote getting drive.

Wallace was born and brought up a Republican from a line of distinguished Republicans. He himself was a member of the GOP until shortly before his appointment as Secretary of Agriculture in 1933.

His grandfather was a member of President Theodore Roosevelt's county life commission, and his father was a secretary of agriculture under President Harding.

The vice presidential nominee was born on an Iowa farm in Adair county on Oct. 7, 1888. He grew up in the Corn state, where he inherited his father's agricultural publishing business after attending Iowa State college.

He grew up tall and thin, with wavy hair. Today he scarcely looks his years despite the seriousness of his demeanor.

In 1914 Wallace married Ilo Brown of Indianola, Iowa, and they have three children—Henry, Robert, and Jean. Mrs. Wallace is extremely youthful looking, presides elegantly over their Washington hotel residence, and helps promote flower shows.

Henry Wallace—he runs with Roosevelt.

9 MANSFIELD YOUTHS HELD IN ROBBERIES

Three Confess Participation In Gasoline Station Hold-Ups, Police Announce.

FACE NEW QUESTIONING

Detectives to Quiz Them In Series of House Breakings In City Recently.

Nine members of an alleged robber gang were held in jail today while police questioned them concerning a series of filling station hold-ups and burglaries in central Ohio during the past several weeks.

The youths, all between the ages of 20 and 25 and all living in Mansfield, were rounded up yesterday afternoon and this morning by Detectives Lee J. Remy and O. M. Krupp and Sheriff E. P. Long.

Seven of the youths, officers said, were picked up yesterday afternoon, three while they were working and the other four at their homes. Two others were taken into custody this morning after police failed to find them at their homes last night.

Remy and Krupp said at noon today they had only been able to question three of the youths, but had already obtained confessions from them concerning holdups of three filling stations and the burglary of three others.

The officers said they had not yet been able to question any of the youths concerning the recent series of house burglaries reported in Mansfield. They planned, however, to grill them about at least three filling station hold-ups here several months ago.

Although, the detectives said they believed that most of the gangs' activity was outside Richland county, Sheriff Long said the trio already questioned had admitted at least one filling station burglary near Mansfield, and another near Shelby.

The burglaries, Long said, in-

Makes Appeal To Reason of English Foes

Warns of Destruction of "Empire" If Britain Insists on Continuing Fight; Asserts Relations With Russia Clear.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN—(AP)—(By Trans-Atlantic 'Phone)—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, speaking before the reichstag tonight addressed "one more appeal to reason in England," warning that "a world empire would be destroyed" if England insists on continuing the fight.

Hitler emphasized he was not asking peace in the voice of a victor demanding capitulation of the vanquished, but rather as a victor proposing a reasonable peace.

He said that "British statesmen apparently have no conception" of the destruction which would be visited on England if Churchill continues to demand a fight to the finish.

"But one thing is sure," he exclaimed, "no Churchill will be left" in that case to attempt the rehabilitation of Britain. The "people left behind in London" after the great assault, he explained, would have ideas entirely different from those of Churchill and his colleagues.

Recalling his previous efforts to conciliate England, Hitler said his policy of European reorganization had been on a two-fold aim: Real friendship with Italy and a similar relationship with England.

It "would have been a boon" to the world if England had accepted, he said.

The fuehrer did not say definitely what he expected Churchill to do in response to his peace offer to England, but he left no doubt that any peace would be on German terms.

Hitler said he "never intended to annihilate or even to harm" the existing world.

He solemnly warned: "In this hour I feel myself obligated to make one more appeal to reason in England."

He said he could do this because he was not asking for peace as one vanquished but rather as the victor appealing to common sense.

The Kroll opera house was a sea of brown uniforms sprinkled with the field gray of the army.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, arrived 15 minutes before Hitler and was given a seat of honor in the diplomatic box opposite the fuehrer.

United States Charge D'Affaires Alexander Kirk also was in the diplomatic box.

Hitler entered the reichstag at 11:55 a. m. (EST) and seven minutes later, Field Marshal Hermann Goering opened the session.

Hitler began speaking after the reichstag had risen in homage to the German and Italian war dead.

"There is no ground for the prolongation of the war," he said. "The British statesmen probably have no real conception of what it will mean, once the German offensive begins in earnest against the British.

"Churchill would not dare to face the music. The people left behind in London would have quite a different conception than that of a governme_t which had fled to Canada.

"Once more I will attempt to be a prophet," said Hitler, prophesying that "world empire will be

Writer Claims Daladier Hindered French Defense

Kept Reynaud From Dismissing General Gamelin In Early Days of Campaign In Norway.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the third of a series of four uncensored articles by Kenneth Downs, chief of the Paris bureau of International News Service, revealing the hidden factors really responsible for collapse of the French Republic.

By KENNETH DOWNS

NEW YORK—(INS)—Game, astute little Paul Reynaud was a thoroughly alarmed and angry man. His face was drawn and his black eyes flashed as he summoned Edouard Daladier.

This was the day, in the first week of May, that the French leaders knew the Allies were hopelessly washed up in Norway. The nation was not to learn for two or three days more.

His sullen resentful minister for war and national defense had no sooner limped into his presence before Reynaud came to the point—Gamelin must go.

With expert assistance, Reynaud said, he had gone into the conduct of French operations in Norway and discovered enough to convince him he would have to dismiss General Maurice Gamelin as commander-in-chief.

He carefully went over the evidence with Daladier. But Daladier, whose personal dislike for Reynaud amounted to hatred, flatly refused to agree to a change. It was no secret that he was waiting to upset Reynaud's government, and now he warned he would resign and provoke a political crisis rather than consent to Gamelin's removal.

The matter was brought before the cabinet on May 9. After a violent argument, it remained undecided. Reynaud considered resignation. But a few hours later, in the early morning of May 10, the great offensive on the western front began.

Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg were being overrun. Tons of bombs were being loosed on northern France and the first of

RECORD FIELD SEEN FOR DERBY

35 Boys Already Working on Coaster Cars; De Paolo To Talk to Youths Today.

What looms as a record entry will compete in the fourth annual Mansfield Soap Box Derby which will be staged Wednesday, Aug. 7.

With some 35 registrations already in the hands of Don D. Cram, Derby director, at least 50 Richland county youngsters are expected to compete in the Mansfield classic. Forty were in the race last year.

Mansfield juvenile racing drivers are busy today assembling coasters which they hope will lead them to victory and an all-expense trip to Akron to participate in the National Derby Sunday, Aug. 11.

That the Mansfield event will be a highlight of the youths' summer vacation is noted in the attendance at the drivers' meetings held by Cram at the Y. M. C. A. Additional sessions will be announced later.

All Mansfield youths entered in the derby are expected to be present at 4 p. m. today when Pete De Paolo, world-famous race driver, will tell the youngsters about big-

CRITICAL NAZIS

See Many Things Wrong With Roosevelt Speech.

BERLIN —(INS)— Nazi quarters today were critical of President Roosevelt's acceptance speech, terming it a "potpouri of contradictory arguments resultant of a bad conscience over violation of the third term tradition."

Roosevelt's address was called "a bald facesiapping of Wendell Willkie and all Roosevelt's opponents as second raters and incompetents."

"For Roosevelt to claim credit for the so-called peace efforts in Europe touches the heights of hypocrisy," German quarters state.

REJECTION: Britain Turns Down Peace Before Offered

(By International News Service)

LONDON—The British government is not disposed to talk peace with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler or his regime at any time but might discuss cessation of hostilities provided Nazi Germany withdraws from all presently conquered territories.

Authoritative British quarters today thus set forth Britain's virtual advance rejection of any "peace offer" the fuehrer may make in his scheduled address to the Reichstag tonight.

"If Hitler wants to make a gesture and withdraw from all the territory he has conquered," informed quarters said, "Britain might be inclined to discuss possible peace terms, providing sufficient security and guarantees are forthcoming that he will keep any promises he may make."

Without actually saying so, spokesmen clearly indicated they held out no hope whatever that Hitler might thus renounce all the gains he has made at a moment when his military machine is ready to strike against the Reich's last European enemy.

SATISFIED: Ohio Delegates Backed Roosevelt to Limit

By CARL TURNER

CHICAGO—(INS)—The last of the Ohio delegation to the Democratic national convention left or prepared to leave for home today, well satisfied that it had carried out its promise to the party—to "go for Roosevelt all the way."

Convention records disclosed that the Buckeye delegation was among the few that remained in line to the end—when it cast its 52 votes for President Roosevelt's indicated choice for a running mate, Secretary Henry A. Wallace.

While delegations from other states were staging a futile "revolt" against selection of Wallace on the first ballot, National Committeeman Charles Sawyer, Cincinnati, "passed" when it came his turn to cast his state's vote. But when the state was called a second time, he cast the entire 52 votes for Wallace.

There was some talk among more independent members of the delegation that they would not stand for a vice presidential candidate "dictated" by the White House. They tried to boom Sawyer for running mate. Sawyer was nominated but withdrew and then they backed Wallace to the limit.

Francis Durbin of Lima, a delegate, put on a one-man demonstration for Ohio against the nomination of Wallace.

Durbin leaped to the platform to nominate Bascom Timmons, Texas newspaper man, and Sawyer after the latter had announced that Ohio had no nomination or second. The Lima delegate apparently referred to the fact that Wallace at one time was affiliated with the Republican party when he shouted:

"Just because the Republicans nominated an apostate Democrat, for God's sake don't let us put one of those things over here."

(Wendell L. Willkie, President Roosevelt's GOP opponent, at one time was a member of the Democratic party.)

Sawyer followed Durbin to the rand to declare:

"In the midst of serious consideration of business in this convention I am sure that you appreciate what Ohio is contributing here tonight."

'Sidewalk Supers' Have A Big Task

By JANE WILLIAMS

There are 175 WPA workers on the West Fourth street paving project, but there are at least that many "sidewalk superintendents."

It's like the Mexican army, more generals than privates, but on the paving project they are strictly ex officio and without portfolio. They stand along the sidewalks and watch the performance of the almost-human steam shovel as it breaks up the 14-inch concrete base that was under the old street car tracks.

Nor are the sidewalk superintendents merely idlers along the street. Proprietors and clerks in stores along the street come out to watch. People in second story windows lean out in sheer fascination to watch the progress of the big shovel as it relentlessly forges ahead clearing a trail through solid concrete as it goes pausing patiently to lift the huge pieces into truck beds.

BATTLE: Raiders Swarm On Warship Off English Coast

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—British and German air fighters engaged in a fierce catch-as-catch-can battle over the Straits of Dover today when a cloud of raiders swarmed down on a destroyer guarding the southeast English coast.

The warship, which was reported undamaged, fought off the attack with intense anti-aircraft fire and brought down one of the planes.

British fighters chased the bombers back to the French coast where they engaged in a sky battle between Boulogne and Calais in which observers said they saw at least four planes falling in flames into the sea.

The attack was the most spectacular of a series of bombing raids this morning on northeast and northwest England, southwest Scotland and on a trawler only 17 miles off the southeast coast of Ireland as the Germans renewed their steady battering tactics against this island fortress.

Six enemy planes swooped low out of the sun and dropped a series of 30 bombs near a southeast town in the face of terrific barrage and a fierce chase by fighters. "Considerable damage" was done, a fire was started, and one of the bombers was sunk in the sea.

Several areas in southwest Scotland were bombed. These attacks followed a bombing of a city in southeast Scotland last night in which a 16-family apartment house was struck.

The air ministry reported this morning that one of the bombers participating in this attack was shot down into the sea. Casualties were reported "very light," however.

Eight bombs were dropped in

Child Molester, 76, Sentenced, Another Suspect Held

JUDGE ORDERS TERM OF YEAR IN WORKHOUSE

Aged Man Admits Molesting Youngsters; Former CCC Employe Jailed.

A 76-year-old child molester was sentenced to the Columbus workhouse today by Probate Judge C. J. Anderson, while police, in another case, held a suspect who was identified by a Mansfield mother and her five-year-old daughter as the man who attempted to assult the child Wednesday in her home.

Pleading guilty before Judge Anderson to a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a 10-year-old girl, Charles Frasher, 76, of 5 West Second street, was sentenced to the workhouse for one year, the maximum sentence that can be imposed in Judge Anderson's court.

Farsher, according to authorities admitted he lured the girl into his room Wednesday night and attempting to mistreat her. He also confessed taking at least seven other small boys and girls to his quarters in recent months, offering them candy or pennies to get them into the house where he roomed alone.

Judge Anderson said none of the children had suffered physical harm. Police arrested Frasher on a complaint filed by the parents of the 10-year-old girl.

Police held for investigation a 30-year-old former employe of the CCC camp at Mohican State park who is believed to be the man who fled from the home of Mrs. George Winbigler, 11½ East Fifth street, after she thwarted an attempted criminal assault on her five-year-old daughter.

Arrested Near City.

The man was taken into custody at 9 a. m. today by police as he walked on Park avenue west near the western edge of the city. Officers were called to arrest him after a resident along the street reported he was acting suspiciously. Mrs. Winbigler and the child identified him in the police lineup, and officers planned to take him to his rooming quarters near the Winbigler home on East Fifth street to look for the clothing he was wearing at the time of the attempted attack.

The suspect told police he had been employed at the camp in Mohican state park and helped to build the Mansfield CCC camp southeast of the city. He was discharged from CCC service about a month ago and recently had been living at an East Fifth street address.

Bricker Invites Willkie to Ohio 1940 State Fair

COLUMBUS — (U.P.)— Two former Ohio residents — Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, and Margaret Speaks, operatic star—have been invited to appear at the 1940 state fair.

Miss Speaks, native of Columbus, already has accepted an invitation to sing on a concert program Sunday, Aug. 25.

Willke, who once lived in Akron, has been invited to governor's Day but his acceptance hinges upon his campaign plans. Governor Bricker issued both invitations.

While state fair Manager Win Kinnan continues to work for the "biggest ever" state exposition, Aug. 24 to 30, the first of the state's 91 counties and independent fairs opens next Tuesday at Washington, C. H. The Fayette county fair is scheduled July 23 to 27.

Mansfield Woman Loses $500 In Swindle

PUTS MONEY IN 'LITTLE BLACK CASE'; IT'S GONE

Tells Police of Loan She Made to Man, Discovery That She Was Robbed.

Two weeks ago an elderly Mansfield woman loaned $500 to a man who posed as a fellow countryman wanting to establish a small business, and today the woman claimed the roll of bills she placed in the man's "little black case" was the pay-off in a swindle scheme.

Mrs. Mary Kordish, 441 Newman street, told police, she discovered the swindle when she pried open the case and found only a bundle of newspaper with the outside wrapped in four $1 bills.

She said she had put $500 in the man's case, which he claimed held another $2,500 with which he was going to establish a business. She told officers she discovered the loss when the man left the case in her care while he was away on an errand.

According to Mrs. Kordish's story, the man came to her home several weeks ago hunting a place to live in Mansfield. She said he told her his wife died about six months ago and that he wanted to live in Mansfield with friends of his own nationality.

He told her he intended to set up a small business here and visited her twice before bringing along a small black case with him.

Mrs. Kordish said the man told her he had $2,500 in the case and that he needed another $500 to establish the business.

While he was talking to her a second man came to the house, posing as the seller of the business, and the two discussed the transaction.

Mrs. Kordish said she then accompanied the men to the Mansfield Savings Trust National bank where she drew out $500. One of the men accompanied her into the bank while the other waited outside.

Returning to her home, she said, she placed the $500 in the man's case. He left the case with her stating that he was going to the railroad station to get his trunk and bring it to her house.

She told police she became suspicious after the pair left. She took a screw driver and pried open the case to find a bundle of newspaper wrapped in the $1 bills.

2 PERSONS HURT

Injured in Auto Crashes Near Nankin and Bellville.

Two persons were injured, neither seriously, in two automobile accidents reported in this area early today and last night.

The injured are Miss Arlene Buckingham, Nankin, and Chester Schlarb, of Mt. Vernon. Both suffered lacerations about the face and head.

Miss Buckingham was injured when the car in which she was riding and driven by William D. Semple of Ashland, collided with another car driven by Norman Baldwin at 8:30 p. m. Thursday at an intersection in Ashland, according to Ashland police.

Schlarb was injured when his car struck a guard rail at 1:30 a. m. today, one mile north of Bellville on route 13. He told highway patrolmen he lost control of the car when something went wrong with the steering apparatus.

SELECTED FOR RIFLE MATCHES

Ashland Guardsmen To Try Out For Places on Team.

Two Ohio National guardsmen from Ashland were among 23 from all sections of Ohio who were invited by the adjutant general's office today to try out for 12 positions on the Ohio National Guard rifle team which will compete in the national rifle matches.

The Ashlanders were Sergeant Joseph L. Hayworth and Private Walter Good. Capt. Perry D. Swindler of Xenia is team captain and Second Lieut. Herschel F. Stegmen of Lima is coach.

The O. N. G. team will defend two national trophies at the meet to be shot at Camp Perry, O., Sept. 1 to 21. Last year the Ohio team topped National Guard entries and finished fifth among all teams in the meet.

Up and Down THE STREET

Ernie Fuller, police identification officer, would be a willing defender of his country — even though he might get a little mixed up on his "present arms" routine. At the ball game the other night when the American Legion drill squad went through its drill, and at the command to "shoulder arms," every man threw his rifle to his right shoulder — except Ernie, who draped it over his left. Ever since he has been taking a lot of kidding as friends demand "What army did you right in?"

It wasn't a purple cow that Patrolmen Floyd Bowers and Glenn Adams were called upon to round up last night, but an honest to gosh bovine. Max Harkeon, 770 West Fourth street, called police headquarters to tell the officers he had caught the animal and tied it to a pole near his home when he found it wandering about. Rather than leave the cow haltered on the street all night, Adams and Bowers led the animal to stadium field and said they hoped it would bring the Tiger football team a little luck this fall.

Just by accident, Charles McKinley, common pleas court assignment clerk, got himself into a housecleaning job at the courthouse this morning. When McKinley rubbed against the wall in his office, the place he brushed clean looked so bright and shiny that he decided to try it on a bigger scale. So he got some soap and water and started out. He said he plans to have the job done before night. The office should look like a new place after he cleans off a three years' accumulation of soot, McKinley commented.

GONE 3 YEARS

O. S. R. Inmate Returned From Michigan Penitentiary.

A Mansfield reformatory inmate who escaped from the Sandusky honor camp more than three years ago was back in a cell today following his return yesterday from Jackson, Mich., by reformatory guards.

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke identified the fugitive as William Tomlinson, committed Nov. 30, 1934, from Ross county on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Glattke said the trusty walked away from the camp May 15, 1937 after serving nearly the full time of a one to three-year sentence.

He was returned today from Jackson, Mich., upon his release from the state penitentiary there.

ALTON, Ill. —(NS)— Thousands of persons from many states were expected to attend funeral services today for Robert Wadlow, the 22-year-old "Alton Giant" who died Monday at Manistee, Mich., of a foot infection.

Because no vault of the necessary size was available, the body of the 8-foot, 10½ inch youth was to be buried in a huge wooden box around which it was planned to pour concrete. Sixteen men were named to carry the 500-pound coffin to its final resting place.

MORE TROUBLE FOR FREIGHTER

Canadian Police Board Ship at Entrance to Canal on Montreal Route.

(By United Press)

PORT COLBORNE, Ontario— The coal-laden Dutch freighter Prins Willem II encountered new legal difficulties today when it was detained by Royal Canadian police.

The boat sailed from Sandusky, Ohio, Wednesday night after being tied up there for six weeks. Yesterday, it entered Port Colborne harbor and signalled for entrance to the Welland ship canal to continue its voyage to Montreal.

The Port Colborne bridge siren blew a warning and 12 policemen came aboard to take charge.

Police refused to answer questions of outsiders about procedure. Captain Christian A. Van Der Eyck, before leaving Sandusky, had said the boat would have safe passage past legal barriers to Montreal where it would be taken over by the British merchant marine. It was planned to sail it to England.

The freighter is loaded with 1,600 tons of coal. It was sailing the Great Lakes when the Germans occupied Holland in May.

YOU MAY BE 'MISS MANSFIELD,' MAIL A LETTER, YOUR PICTURE

Dropping a letter in a mailbox is going to win some girl in the city the title of "Miss Mansfield." It's also going to win her a handsome beauty accessory and a flight from Alliance to Mansfield airport with an escort of 100 planes.

And it may very well win her a free air trip to the New York World's fair.

All this is true because the Mansfield Junior Association of Commerce is staging a Miss Mansfield contest in connection with the all-Ohio air tour which will visit Mansfield airport Sunday, July 28, at 3:35 p. m.

An entry blank for the contest, open to all Mansfield girls, appears herewith. To enter the contest a contestant should fill out the blank and mail it to the Junior Association of Commerce, 501 Farmers Bank building.

Each blank must be accompanied by a photograph.

A J. A. C. committee early next week will make its selection of Miss Mansfield on the basis of photographs submitted. The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Take Me Out to The Ball Game.

During these gentle months of summer, when the Broadwayites get up early enough to have breakfast at lunch time, a great many of the more familiar characters from the Times Square-Tin Pan Alley pleasure belt can be found behind third base at the local ball parks, sunning themselves and calling the umpire names.

They are all fervid fans actually or because it makes good copy all desperately partisan; and after the ninth inning they hurry back to the bistros to boast or heckle or moan into the martinis, depending upon the day's scores.

Most colorful rooter is, of course, Tallulah Bankhead, whose heart bleeds every time a Giant player strikes out, and who has been known to weep right in the Stork club because her team lost a double header. She is in a box at the Polo Grounds at every game when she's in town; this season, she came close to being barred despite the fact that the players adore her, because the first couple of times she went up to watch, they lost the games. It has since been proven, however, that Tallulah had nothing to do with it.

The other of the two noticeable feminine diamond fans is Mildred Riley, the Diamond Horseshoe showgirl, probably the only pretty belle in town who can talk shop with an outfielder. She's a Yankee fan; when the Yankees aren't in town she goes up to the Polo Grounds just to watch the scoreboard and see how her team is making out.

Toots Shor is the No. 1 male fan. When the Giants lose, Toots loses his appetite, and with Toots this is like Hedy Lamarr losing her eyelashes. . . .

One night after the Giants had taken a terrific drubbing, Toots, whose restaurant is a clubhouse for almost every baseball fan on the Broadway beat, invited a couple of friends to dine in a rival eatery. "I feel so terrible I want to complain about the food," he moaned, "so let's go to that other joint."

George M. Cohan has the reputation of being a terrific Giant fan, but I've only seen him at a ball game once, and that was at the Yankee Stadium. . . .

George Raft hits the ball parks regularly when he comes east. He goes to the games "incognito," arrives about the 3rd inning, walks from an entrance around first base to his seat around 3rd, and signs autographs. . . .

Gene Autry is another movie star who goes to the games hoping not to be noticed. The last time I saw him in a baseball stadium he arrived late and left early, wearing a powder blue shirt, white jodhpurs, and a 10-gallon hat.

Jack White, chief noisemaker at the Club 18, is the loudest Giant rooter in town, if not in America, but according to the experts he is strictly a professional fan. His devotion to the team makes great gags around midnight and at the 2 a. m. show, but it is noted by keen observers that he usually leaves the games around the sixth inning, and that on days with no sun he does not show at all.

His headwaiter, Don Weatherston, is another story. Don is what the connoisseurs of the great American pastime regard as an on-the-level addict. He brings his wife and child to the games. When the Club 18 closed from Thursday through Sunday over the Fourth of July holiday, White went out of town. Weatherston, however, wouldn't; it would have meant missing a Giant game. This is considered genuine, 100 per cent devotion.

Harry Ruby, the songwriter, has a baseball uniform and glove, and he puts it on to listen to the radio reports of the games even when he is in California. When guests come to visit him, Ruby dons the uniform and plays catch in the living room of his house. . . . Tony Martin is a fan with such catholicity of allegiance that he brings a portable radio to one game so he can listen to another.

Jimmy Van Heusen, the song writer, couldn't even stay away from the Polo Grounds the afternoon he was due to sign his contract to go to Hollywood; he took the film executive up to the ball park with him and closed the deal in Section 27, Box A.

Most of the local celebrities are Giant fans rather than Yankee rooters chiefly because the late John McGraw was one of the great Broadway characters, and the Main Stemmers knew and loved him, and came to regard the Yankees as mere interlopers.

After the local citizens have paid afternoon tribute to the ball camps a number of the players return the compliment by showing up in the bright light zone after dark, being careful during the season not to make it too long after dark.

Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers' dream boy, appears frequently within the chorus girl circuit, and causes all kinds of flutters among the beauties: Paul Waner, the Pittsburgh Pirate, is happy in the Kit Kat, and Leo Durocher, owner of the Brooklyns, is a familiar face at LaConga, the Diamond Horseshoe, and the Hurricane. . . . Horace Stoneham talks shop at Toots Shor's.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—What to do, what to do? What kind of pictures to make. War or no-war, heavy or light?

Hollywood is answering the questions with generalities which may or may not mean anything. Hollywood also answers the questions with production plans, and here are the films they're making or talking about making, this summer or later:

"Billy the Kid" will give Robert Taylor another Hi-Mister he-man role, miles removed from the Hey-Kid pretty-boy assignments of some of his past features. "Santa Fe Trail" will claim Errol Flynn for another in the "Dodge City"-"Virginia City" chain. "Silver Queen," yarn of Alaska's gold rush, is booked for Claire Trevor. "When the Daltons Rode" is nearing completion with Kay Francis and Randolph Scott. "Rangers of Fortune" and "Texas" and "Brigham Young" and "Arizona" and "Return of Frank James" and "Cherokee Strip" and "Kit Carson" (with Jon Hall) are others making it appear that the West still is safe for the screen. Add "Calamity Jane" and a few more and you've got what looks like a first-class cycle.

The sea still is open to Hollywood, too. "Captain Horatio Hornblower," the great adventure yarn, is still on tap. "The Long Voyage Home" is Eugene O'Neill stuff, handled by salty John Ford. Frank Lloyd, the "Mutiny on the Bounty" man, talks of a sequel.

There shall be music in big and little musicals. MacDonald and Eddy in "Bittersweet," the Noel Coward operetta. Allan Jones, Susanna Foster in "There's Magic in Music." The Irving Berlin number, "Say It With Music." And "Down Argentine Way" (Betty Grable-Don Ameche) and "Song of the Islands" "Argentine Nights" (Ritz brothers, Andrews sisters). "Spring Parade" (Deanna Durbin). "Love Thy Neighbor" (Jack Benny-Fred Allen). "Too Many Girls," with George Abbott bringing his own show to films. "A Little Bit of Heaven" (Gloria Jean). Another cycle.

There shall be Capra—who perhaps ought to be listed under mysteries because he's been keeping "The Life of John Doe" a secret. (It's reported to be about a baseball player, Gary Cooper.)

There'll be sweetness and light, comedy and romance. "Little Men" and "Laddie" and "Honeymoon for Three" (Ann Sheridan-George Brent) and more of "Dr. Christian" (Jean Hersholt) and "Three Girls and a Gob" (Harold Lloyd production), and "Her Father's Daughter" (by Gene Stratton-Porter) (also author of "Laddie").

There'll be stage plays ranging from "The Letter" and "Philadelphia Story" to "They Knew What They Wanted" and "The Constant Nymph."

There'll be serious stuff, but not so much. "Flotsam," the Frederic March picture, "Secret Army," the Fifth Column yarn. "Sister Carrie," the Dreiser story.

The great outdoors (apart from the westerns) calls DeMille once again. "Reap the Wild Wind" story of the Florida keys, is the next.

It looks, in plans, like a summer of "business as usual."

Moundsmen Falter as Mansfield Loses to Findlay

Fans Wondering If This Is the Annual Blow Up

About This Time of Year Indians Usually Are Knocked Out of Pennant Race.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The season of fears and forebodings is at hand for Cleveland Indians fans.

Eyeing the Tribe's five straight losses, the Cleveland camp clan crossed its fingers today and apprehensively queried: "Can this be it?"

They referred to the Indians' perennial slump. About this time of year, for more seasons than the club likes to recall, there has set in a decline that has knocked Cleveland out of the pennant race. Usually they have faltered on eastern tours.

But while the fans had qualms, club officials were not visibly dismayed.

"I think our three top pitchers, Bob Feller, Al Milnar and Al Smith, are insurance against a prolonged slump and I look for a fight race, with the leading teams bunched at the end of the season," said Vice President C. C. Slapnicka at Cleveland.

President Alva Bradley, who looked on "as a fan" as his club took a 9 to 6 drubbing from the Yankees yesterday, remarked:

* * *

"Naturally, I hate to see this losing streak, but I haven't any intention of talking to the players about it. So far as I'm concerned, we're set for the rest of the season."

Smith was nominated to start for the Tribe in the wind-up of their New York stand, while Lefty Gomez got the nod for the Yanks.

It was one of Cleveland's top-bracket pitchers — Milnar — who was charged with yesterday's defeat which dropped the club into second place again, a half-game behind Detroit and ahead of Boston by the same margin.

The Yanks reached Milnar and two successors, Nate Andrews and Harry Eisenstat, for 10 hits including three home runs.

* * *

The Tribe got all eight of its hits off Spud Chandler, who was replaced in the eighth by Bump Hadley.

Mansfielders Erecting Backstop at Maple Lake Tennis Court

Approximately 50 Mansfielders assisted in the erecting of the backstop at the new Maple Lake tennis court yesterday. The court was built by the Maple Lake Park association of which Frank Glasgow is president and Gordon Swan secretary and treasurer. The courts will be completed in 10 days, Swan stated today. Grading and rolling is expected to be finished within a week and the center posts and fences will go up immediately afterwards. Funds for the court were raised by the association through a membership drive.

Braves Fall Farther Behind Leaders; Tackle Findlay at Fair Park at 8:30 P. M. Today.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THE MANSFIELD BRAVES will have to send out an S. O. S. call for pitchers if they want to make a bid for championship honors in the Ohio State league.

Two of the Braves' best hurlers worked on the hill last night as the club dropped a one-sided 11 to 5 decision to the Oilers at Findlay.

Last night's defeat dropped Mansfield below the .500 per cent mark and left the team 13 games behind the pace-making Lima Pandas.

Who will work on the mound tonight when the Braves entertain Findlay at the Fair park before a "Ladies' night" gathering remains a mystery. It is likely, however, that Manager Dewey Stover will use Setiman, a righthander.

It was the same old story last night — mound weakness. The Braves gave Bob Arnold, who started the game, a 4 to 2 lead going into the last of the second, but Findlay collected four tallies before the side could be retired.

And from there on in it was all Findlay. The second-place combine added two markers in the fifth and finished the scoring with three scores in the eighth.

Mansfield did manage to dent the plate once in the seventh, but that was all.

Findlay found Arnold and Rex Benten for 14 hits, including two home runs and five doubles. In all, the Oilers made their hits count for 25 bases.

Frank Ankenbrandil, subbing for the injured Hal Hundemer at second, led the Braves at the plate with a double and single, and Gene Woodling added two singles to the attack. These two youngsters got four of the five bingies secured by the club.

Mansfield faces a real fest during the next four days. After meeting Findlay tonight the Braves travel to Lima Saturday night and come back to the Fairground to tangle with Findlay in a double header Sunday. The first game Sunday is scheduled to start at 1:30 p. m. Monday the Braves square off against Lima at the Fairground.

* * *

The Friendly House Knot Hole league players will be the guests of the Braves at the twin bill Sunday. Mike Wentz, settlement boys' director, announced today. All younsters must wear their league caps and will meet at the south side of the ticket office at 1 p. m.

Player Steals Home In 10th as Fremont Wins.

FREMONT (AP)—That threatened strike of Fremont players in the Ohio State baseball league last week is being viewed by the Green Sox front office as a blessing in disguise.

Club officials attributed to "fan loyalty" aroused by the ruckus the presence of 710 persons—the season's largest crowd—last night to watch First Sacker Fred Gerken steal home in the 10th inning to give the Sox a 7 to 6 victory over the Tiffin Hens. Lima's first place Pandas took Fostoria 7 to 4.

Race Driver to Tell Mansfield Of His Career

The story of his thrilling career as a race pilot in the United States, Germany, Italy, France and Spain will be the subject of Peter De Paolo's speech at the Grotto hall tonight at 8 p. m.

De Paolo, who is brought here by the Mansfield Automotive Supply company, will dwell chiefly on the many crack-ups which, at times, threatened to end his career. He is known among veteran race drivers as the "Wall Smacker."

The famous racer also spoke before the Soap Box Derby entrants today at 4 p. m. at the Y. M. C. A.

Yankees Continue to Gain In Junior Race

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

THE American League still is boiling over, like a pot of hot porridge, and there doesn't seem to be anything anyone can do about it.

The Cleveland Indians stumbled into their fifth consecutive defeat yesterday, 9-6, at the hands of the ever dangerous New York Yankees. Four losses got 'em into first place, but five took 'em out.

Both the Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers had a chance to scoot into the lead, but when they finished battling each other at the end of 11 wild innings, it was Detroit that was on top, 10-8.

This was a game that had everything, including a triple play.

The Yankees sewed up their victory in the first two innings.

Joe DiMaggio extended his batting streak to 13 consecutive games by poling his 17th home run in the seventh inning.

Although they are in fourth place, the world champions are only four games behind the leaders.

The amazing Washington Senators, in last place only last Sunday, chalked up their fifth triumph in a row with a 5-4 decision over the Chicago White Sox.

The streak to end all streaks, however, was the one the St. Louis Browns extended to 14 games, all losses, yesterday. This isn't a record—yet—but it is one more defeat than the Browns ever had suffered in succession before. The 10-3 victory that the Philadelphia Athletics took from them was a combination of five-hit hurling by Johnny Babich and a 17-hit assault of five St. Louis slingers.

The National League program was abbreviated to two games and the Brooklyn Dodgers made the most of the idleness of the Cincinnati Reds by whipping the Chicago Cubs 7-1 to narrow the gap between first and second place to three games.

Carl Hubbell got the chance he wanted to work in a night game and handcuffed the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 on six hits.

Girls Handed 13-10 Defeat

Orrville Moose Club Outhits Merchants at Orrville.

More than 2,000 spectators saw the Mansfield Merchant Girls handed a 13 to 10 scorching at the hands of the Orrville Moose club softballers at Orrville last night.

Blank started on the mound for the Mansfielders but was relieved in the sixth by Clark, after the Moose men had chalked up their 13-run total.

The Orrville lads held a nine run dead in the first two frames after they had pushed over four runs in the first and five in the second. But the Merchants staged a rally in the third and fourth innings to close the gap.

The girls got three runs in the third and five in the fourth, but dropped behind as the Moose club got two in the fifth and added two more in the sixth. Holda led the hitting for the Mansfielders, getting three hits out of four trips to the platter.

County Fair Olympics Program Broadened

Track and Field Carnival Designed to Take Place of "Athletic Field Day."

BROADENING its original plan so that the Junior Olympics will attract hundreds of youngsters, all eligible to compete, the Richland County Fair board today announced that the Olympic carnival to be held at the fair this year will be arranged to take the place of the annual athletic "field day" held for city playgrounds.

With the playground 'field day" cancelled this year because of discontinuance of city supervised recreation grounds, fair board directors have set out to build up an attractive Olympic program for youngsters nine to 15 years old.

The Olympics are to be staged two mornings of the four-day fair. Preliminary events are to be held from 9 to 12 a. m. on the first day and finals will be run off on the following morning. Ribbons will be awarded winners in the preliminary rounds and cash prizes will be awarded final winners. The prizes are such that they will not interfere with amateur athletic standards.

Directing the Junior Olympics is Don Cram, Y. M. C. A. physical director, and his staff of assistants.

In sponsoring the Olympics the fair board has arranged to hold special matinees for children on the two days. They have arranged for picnic grounds for children to eat their lunches and in the afternoon they will be admitted to the grandstand county fair attractions for an admission charge of 10 cents.

On the first day of the special childrens' matinees, the fair board will present a series of circus acts, a rodeo performance and other grandstand entertainment which will be climaxed by a balloon ascension in which a girl is shot from a cannon when the balloon reaches 3,000 feet. The girl, a member of the troupe of "Flying Allens," glides to earth in a parachute.

On the second day of the Olympics the matinee will feature the Boone County Jamboree, radio hillbilly entertainers, a demonstration in trick riding by Cleveland's widely acclaimed Troop A, of Mounted policemen, and other entertainment. The second day's matinee will also be climaxed by another balloon-cannon ascension.

The Olympic competition will include all forms of track meet events, in addition to bicycle races, model airplane flying, horseshoe pitching and other contests. A complete list of events will be announced later.

Cram today announced that the Olympics will be started with a relay race from Mansfield's downtown to the fairground. Fourteen runners will compete in the relay, he said.

* * *

They will leave Park avenue west and Walnut streets at 8:30 a. m. and will join other contestants and spectators at the fairground in racing time.

Ohio's Newest Lake May Be Opened for Fishing Next Year

By ROBERT OLDS

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Angles for anglers: scribble inside the lid of your tackle box the fact that Ohio's newest state lake, Kiser lake, probably will be opened for fishing next year.

Located in western Champaign county near St. Paris, Kiser covers approximately 250 acres and is described by H. A. (Buck) Rider, assistant state conservation commissioner, as "the ideal lake."

Kiser was filled up during the spring and recently the water has cleared up making it habitable for fish.

"We tested it less than 10 days ago and from all indications we'll be able to stock Kiser heavily this fall and open it up next year," said Rider, who is the division's fishing chief. Already 4,000 bullheads have been planted in the lake. They were taken from a nearby pond which was drained recently.

According to Buck, the lake is highly suitable because it averages about 10 feet in depth, which is considered proper for natural propagation of fish. Many fish shelters were constructed when the lake was built. Engineers have noted very little soil erosion and the lake's feeder streams are clear. Rider said that half a dozen springs also feed into Kiser. This he said, tends to "stabilize" the water temperature and establish a "happy medium" for growing fish.

Another "new" lake is Van Buren lake which covers about 30 acres and is located near Findlay. Known as one of the headwater types of lakes, it filled up at about the same time as did Kiser. . . . Fish management agent tests indicate that Lake Alma, Jackson county, has a larger percentage of bass than any other state lake. . . . Another state lake "of considerable proportions" is being built in that county.

The conservation division and the Ohio Junior Chamber of Commerce are considering a planting project for the banks of streams to curb damaging soil erosion which has been especially serious this year because of heavy rains.

Under the proposed joint-project thousands of plants such as Willow, Mulberry and Wild Rose, would be planted along the banks of streams throughout the state to hold back the soil, provide habitat for fish and food for wild animals. About 40 different kinds of plants would be used.

* * *

Officials in the division feel that it would be a worthwhile long-time project with results more lasting than mere fish stocking operations. Some experts feel that the extensive runoff of surface water in Ohio is as serious as the lowered water table. They point out that the state has a forest coverage of 13 per cent rather than 21 per cent which is considered essential.

Angel Takes Punishment, But Finally Tops Rival.

CLEVELAND — (NS) — An angel can take just so much punishment and then even he has to do something about it. In this case the angel was Maurice "Angel" Tillet, better known as the French Nightmare, and he took the punishment, half an hour of it, from Ernie, oldest and roughest of the rough Dusek brothers. After just so much of the Dusek roughness, the Angel turned on the heat and flattened Brother Ernie with three "gorilla" holds. Time was 38 minutes, 37 3-5 seconds.

THOMPSON WINS TITLE

LAKESIDE (AP) — Robert Thompson of Youngstown walked off with the lion's share of honors at the Northern Ohio Junior Tennis championships here. He defeated William Heil of Monroe, Mich., 6-4, 6-0, yesterday to win the singles crown and then teamed with Howard Johnson, also of Youngstown, to best John Martin and Ernest Janson, both of Springfield 6-4 8-6 for the doubles title.

PLANS TO SEND LEVY REQUEST TO COUNCILMEN

Mayor Says Appeal for Special Tax to Go Before Council Committee Soon.

City council's finance committee within the next few days will be asked to approve the submission of a one-mill operating levy to the voters at the November election.

Mayor William J. Locke announced today that he would submit the proposal to the committee as a means of raising approximately $53,000 annually for five city departments.

His announcement was made following a meeting yesterday with the heads of the five departments during which it was agreed to combine the levy requests in one issue.

Locke said no definite amounts had been decided upon but it had been agreed that the combined requests should be kept within the one-mill limit.

Attending the meeting were Floyd Dent, chairman of the city recreation board, Roy Vaughn, president of the board of parks commissioners, Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger, and Dr. L. D. Bonar and James R. Harrington, representing the airport.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates, who has favored the idea as a means of raising funds to additional patrolmen and radio equipment, was out of the city.

Approval of the levy would provide additional finances for five years for the fire and police departments which have repeatedly requested additional manpower. It would also provide for needed improvements at the municipal airport and further rehabilitation of the city parks and maintainence of supervised playgrounds.

The mayor has suggested the levy as an end to keeping the city on a "pay-as-you-go" basis rather than increase the municipality's bonded indebtedness.

Tentative outline of the distribution would include $17,500 annually for replacing the city's antiquated fire apparatus, $7,500 for four additional firemen, approximately $10,000 for hiring four additional patrolmen and improving the police radio system; $5,000 annually for maintaining supervised playgrounds, $5,000 for permanent improvements at the airport, and another $7,500 for park improvements.

Hobby Club Delays Excursion Trip to Greenfield Village

Postponement of an excursion trip to Greenfield Village, Detroit, to be sponsored by the Buckeye Hobby club, was announced yesterday by Donald Cram, "Y" physical director and chairman of the excursion committee.

The trip, originally set for this week, has been postponed until sometime in late September or early October.

Decision to postpone the excursion was made because of previously arranged vacations by a number of persons who had planned to make the trip, Cram said. A definite date will be announced later.

Registrations can now be made at the Y. M. C. A. Any adult persons in Mansfield and surrounding towns is eligible to register for the trip.

The excursion will be made by Pennsylvania train, and includes a night's stay at the New Wolverine hotel in Detroit.

HOUSTON, Tex.—(NS)—Ninety-nine years is a long, long time, as the popular song goes, but Bennie Lee Armstrong and Dudley Willis, negroes, have an even longer time than that to serve. On their pleas of guilty, they were sentenced to five life sentences each for a murder and four robbery cases, and 15 years each for assault to murder. Sentences were made consecutive.

TRADERS STILL UNCERTAIN ON STOCK TRENDS

Convention Failed to Move Wary Buyers Who Keep Eyes on Europe.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks continued at the market crossroads today apparently unable to decide much direction to travel.

Speculative forces, brokers said, were unexcited by President Roosevelt's acceptance of renomination. The European war question and the desire for more light on home business prospects still were seen as the main recovery handicaps.

Bonds and commodities, like stocks, failed to work up a real trend.

Among resistant shares were Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Pennsylvania, Willys Overland common and preferred, Montgomery Ward and International Nickel.

Motors were listless as Ward's summary revealed another drop in this week's automotive production.

WALLACE GETS SELECTION AS RUNNING MATE

Roosevelt Orders New Deal Offensive on Wendell Willkie Camp.

got him after a wrangling roll call in which big delegations had to poll and came up with tenths and fifths of votes cast in protest against the administration organization.

And then a silence fell upon the assembly. At 12:20 a. m., the president began to speak.

But this time he was not there. His voice came, smooth and reassuring as a benediction, from loud speakers overhead as this Democratic man of all time, said—"I will."

No campaigning will he do this year, he told the convention, but he will talk to the press and over the radio from time to time to report to the people on the crisis he says exists and to refute "deliberate or unwitting falsification of fact, which are sometimes made by political candidates."

He was loathe to continue in the White House and would rather retire. But for developments after Europe's September declarations of war, Mr. Roosevelt said, he would have renounced public office long before this. But, he said, he could not renounce it now

"Every day that passed called for postponement of personal plans and partisan debate," he told the packed stadium, and the nation, "until the latest possible moment. The normal conditions under which I would have made public declaration of my personal desires were gone.

"Thinking solely of the national good and of the international scene I came to the reluctant conclusion that such declaration should not be made before the national convention. It was accordingly made to you within an hour after the permanent organization of the convention."

In this speech of acceptance Mr. Roosevelt made himself the nation's No. 1 draftee in the cause of peace and national defense and he said all citizens are agreed that some sort of draft was as fair and necessary today as in 1917.

"My conscience will not let me turn my back upon a call to service," he confided.

"The right to make that call rests with the people through the American method of free election. Only the people themselvs can draft a president. If such a draft should be upon me, I say, in the utmost simplicity, I will, with God's help, continue to serve with the best of my ability and with the fullness of my strength."

And he thanked the convention for naming Wallace, he said, he wanted a man of that turn of mind to fight beside him.

All of that came from the calm surroundings of the White House where Mr. Roosevelt stayed through the four days of the futile fight to stop him. The circumstances were as unusual, perhaps, as eight years ago when he stepped down from an airplane—the first presidential nominee to fly. Now he is the first to accept a nomination by radio a few hours after it was extended, and that broken precedent sent him into the battle to break the third term precedent—that one which says no man shall serve more than twice as chief executive.

From the man in the White House to the man who sat, hands cupped over his face on the convention platform came this word:

"And to the chairman of the party—as I have often called him, my old friend, Jim Farley—I send you, as I have often done before, my most sincere appreciation for the help that he has given and for the help which I know he will continue to give.

"As I think my good wife suggested a few hours ago, in some respects the next few months will be different from the usual national campaigns of recent years. Most of you know how important it is that the president in these days remain close to the seat of government. Since last summer I have been compelled to abandon proposed journeys to inspect many of our national projects from the Alleghanies to the Pacific coast.

"Events move so fast in other parts of the world that it has become my duty to remain either in the White House itself or at some nearby point—I shall not have time or the inclination to engage in a rash political debate. But I shall never be loathe to call the attention of the nation to deliberate or unwitting falsifications of fact, which are sometimes made by political candidates."

The first lady moved all smiling to the platform at the end of a bitter roll call for vice presidential nomination and said her husband was "too busy to be here and told of the responsibilities of men in office and of those who vote to keep him there.

"To be a candidate of either great political party is a very serious and a very solemn thing," she said. "You cannot treat it as you would treat an ordinary nomination in an ordinary time."

If the back of rebellion against Wallace was not broken before she spoke, Mrs. Roosevelt was telling those delegates to behave by appealing to their love of country. She had her own tribute to Jim Farley.

"I want to say a word to our national chairman, James A. Farley," she said. "For many years I have worked under Jim Farley and with Jim Farley, and I think nobody could appreciate more what he has done for the party, what he has given in work and loyalty, and I want here to give him my thanks and devotion."

There was much bitterness in the stadium last night and early today but the convention ended on Mr. Roosevelt's key of attack on the Republican nominee on the grounds of inexperience and doubtful capacity for the world crisis and domestic needs.

"Lying awake, as I have on many nights," Mr. Roosevelt said, "I have asked myself whether I have the right, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, to call on men and women to serve their country or to train themselves to serve and, at the same time, decline to serve my country in my own personal capacity, if I am called up on to do so by the people of my country."

"The government of the United States for the past seven years has had the courage openly to oppose by every peaceful means," he continued, "the spread of the dictator form of government. If our government should pass to other hands next January—untried hands, inexperienced hands—we can merely hope and pray that they will not substitute appeasement and compromise with those who seek to destroy all democracies everywhere, including here.

"I would not undo, if I could, the efforts I made to prevent war—I do not now soften the condemnation expressed by Secretary Hull and myself for the acts of aggression that have wiped out ancient liberty-loving peace pursuing countries which had scrupulously maintained neutrality. I do not recant—."

And there it was, the 1940 foreign relations plank of the New Deal-Democratic party and nothing in the formally adopted platform would have any effect on it whatever.

Mr. Roosevelt, too, declared war on poverty, suffering and ill health in an affirmation in general of the first and second New Deal and he said you could call all of it reform or social legislation what you will.

The galleries went wild when Speaker Don Welch of the Oklahoma state legislature went to the mircophone and offered Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt—who had steadfastly refused to give his consent to his name being offered because Mr. Roosevelt wanted Wallace.

McNutt rushed to the platform while Welch was speaking, but when he concluded, the band struck up "Indiana" and the galleries roared and the delegates poured into the aisles.

The tall white-haired McNutt strode to the front of the platform. His chin was set firmly and he was frowning.

The delegates knew what he wanted to do—and they would have no part of it. He started to speak, and the crowd roared so loud he could not be heard. Women delegates screamed, "McNutt, McNutt," and red-haired Gov. Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma yelled: "Don't do it, Paul."

It was the most extraordinary demonstration of approval that this convention had given to any man—including Mr. Roosevelt—But McNutt was angry. Barkley tried to get order, but without avail. McNutt pleaded with the delegates to listen, but the crowd thundered "No." Finally, he shouted loud enough for the crowd to hear:

"I want to express my eternal gratitude," he said. "We must have leaders who have demonstrated what they can do and what they will do—men who have been through the fires and have come out true and proven leaders.

"We have such a leader in Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He is my commander-in-chief. I follow his wishes and I am here to support his choice for vice president. I therefore ask in all sincerity that my name be withdrawn. . . ."

SAYS DALADIER TO BLAME FOR FRENCH DEFEAT

Kept Reynaud From Ousting General Gamelin From Head of Army.

those unforgettable tides of refugees which were to paralyze the French armies, already were beginning to choke the roads.

The president of the republic urged Reynaud not to resign. Daladier was obdurate on Gamelin so Reynaud, feeling it might do more harm than good to make a switch at such a critical hour, let the generalissimo remain.

It required the break-through on the Meuse in the next few days, revealing the pitiful inadequacy of the French military preparations, to bring about the end of Gamelin as commander-in-chief. General Weygand, the much-advertised "fireman," was rushed in to try to save the day.

Weygand did his best. His improvised defense-in-depth slowed the enemy advance and exacted a heavy toll of men and machines.

It was too late.

The ninth army was shattered, the seventh and part of the first armies were cut off in Belgium, and vast quantities of sorely-needed material were lost. The fire was beyond control when the fireman arrived.

This story, with its implications of lack of foresight, inefficiency, divided counsel, and personal political animosities at the very hour the nation's fate was being cast, may seem incredible enough.

But even more incredible was the fact that the high command had not been shaken up severely at the start of the war, or even before hostilities commenced. For it was an open secret among the career men of the army that Gamelin would have to go.

That is why a large percentage of the younger element in the active army hoped desperately that the Germans would attack early.

I first heard this amazing wish expressed one night last October by one of the most brilliant young officers of the Etat-Major of G. O. G. I knew this officer intimately, having spent a good deal of time with him before the war in both North Africa and France, so he spoke candidly when I asked him how he evaluated the French chances.

"We have a chance if the Germans attack this fall," he said. "But if we go through the winter without fighting, I'm afraid we shall be sunk."

He smiled at my amazement.

"You see," he explained, "we must have a shock very soon. There are several reasons. First we need a shock before we can get rid of our useless generals. We have more than 400 generals in the army and most of them—including M. Gamelin—have passed their usefulness. We are a tradition-bound institution and we shan't be able to get rid of them until we have had a disaster.

"The nation needs a jolt too. If we are hit now we perhaps can galvanize our national effort in time. But if we stand still through the winter the old dissensions will continue until it is too late. Furthermore, our troops won't be ready to fight.

"Our soldiers are magnificent. But I know my countrymen. If they don't have action quickly, they won't be much good by spring."

I asked what was wrong with Gamelin.

"General Gamelin is just not cut out for commander-in-chief in war time," he said. "He lacks energy and imagination. He doesn't know what modern warfare is. He is far too timid and will hesitate at decisions which mean a cost of life. He is a tired man, a weak man."

He paused, then said:

"General Giraud is the man. There is a general. Politics have kept him back, but when the shock comes, he will be called. Huntzinger, Weygand and possibly George or Pretelat are other possibilities. But Gamelin and the other dodos will have to go, or we are lost."

How correct my friend's prophecy proved! I heard the same thing many times. And especially I heard the name of Giraud, from one end of the army to the other.

But you will recall what happened. The great General Giraud was kept in command of the seventh army up on the channel until the offensive started. He led his troops into Belgium at a dawn on May 10th. Then the disaster came at Sedan. The ninth army was broken and the Germans poured across the Meuse.

Giraud at that desperate hour was called out of Belgium and given command of the group of armies which was to try to bring order out of chaos. Too late, too late.

The gallant general gambled his life like a common soldier to try to save the impossible situation. He raged along the front in a tank to rally his forces, personally view conditions and virtually attempt to stem the enemy advance with his own hands. He was captured in almost the same place he was taken prisoner in the battle of Guise in 1914.

I spent three days at General Giraud's headquarters in St. Omer in February and I found him to be one of the few senior officers who looked on the situation with fearless, discerning eyes. His cry was for machines and more machines and national discipline. He did not suffer from the Maginot line opiate which seemed to keep so many of the high command in a dream world. He told me at that time:

"The Germany of today is far more dangerous than the Germany of 1914. Unfortunately our nation and the world generally do not seem to realize this. But we will learn when the terrible test comes. And England will learn. And I think you in America will learn, before it is all over.

"I do not think France will be defeated. But it will be a long and terrible war before we can win. I repeat—long and terrible."

I had the general's permission to cable this interview at the time, but the censors killed it. The censors hated truth that was even mildly unpalatable.

'Sidewalk Supers' at Work on Big Job

Once you stop to watch the big shovel, you're lost. Your lunch hour slips by and still you can't tear yourself away. Yesterday there were no less than a hundred people at all times along the street, and during the noon hour there were several hundred.

All eyes follow the big crane and the iron shovel which opens and closes like the mouth of some prehistoric animal crunching stones. If the operator misses, if the big shovel doesn't "swallow" a huge chunk of concrete quite properly, or fails to pick it up, all eyes turn to the operator. They are reproachful eyes, like those of a back seat driver.

The operator sits at the controls unperturbed by the interested but critical audience. He shows more poise than a movie star at a personal appearance. He uses both feet and both hands in operating the levers.

As the tongs on the big shovel slip under the bed of concrete to break out a new bite, it taxes the engine and the cabin very nearly stands on its caterpillar nose. As the shovel seems to grunt and groan under its Gargantuan effort to break the concrete, the sidewalk spectators hold their breath until the base begins to break and as a huge chunk is swung high and dropped with a thump, the pent-up breath goes out of the crowd like a sigh.

"Sure seems human, the way it works to gain its ends," a spectator said. "And look at the way it nudges a hunk of concrete into place. The way that guy in the cabin jockeys the crane around and gets the concrete slabs into place, you'd think he was a billiard player."

One Mansfield worker complained bitterly yesterday that he and the shovel operator take their lunch hour at the same time and that he never gets to see the shovel in operation.

And an elderly Mansfield man said yesterday there was just too much going on at one time—he couldn't make up his mind whether to stay home and listen to the Democratic convention broadcast, or go down town and "supervintend" the big shovel on the West Fourth street paving project.

The annual Tri-County picnic of the Odd Fellows lodge will be held Sunday at the Knox county fairgrounds in Mt. Vernon, lodge officials announced today.

The affair is held each year for members of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges, their families and friends, living in Richland, Ashland and Knox counties.

A program of music and contests has been planned for the day, and several state officers of the lodge are expected to address the gathering. The local committee in charge of arrangements is made up of Charles Wilson, Ross Zediker, Mrs. Fanny DeYarman and James Sellars.

time racing and how to build racers to reach the highest speed.

Cram today is still anxious for all boys building or planning to build a derby car to secure a rules book before starting work on the coaster.

One of the most important items is the expense of the car. No lad may spend more than $10 in equipment and must assemble the auto himself. He can, however, seek advice from parents or Derby officials.

One Richland county youngster is all set for the Derby. He is Robert Ross, 15 of Plymouth. He won the right to compete in the Mansfield classic by winning the Plymouth Derby held last week. Ross, who will enter the Class A division, finished third at Mansfield last year.

Shelby will also be represented in the Mansfield event. The neighboring city will stage its annual affair Thursday, July 25 and the winner will compete in the Mansfield races.

Another thing that is creating more interest in the Mansfield race this year is the list of prizes the heat winners and runner-up will receive. The list of prizes will be announced in The News-Journal within a few days.

cluded the looting of a filling station on U. S. route 42 in Lincoln Heights and a station on route 61, west of Shelby. They also confessed to robbing a third station on U. S. route 30 between Crestline and Bucyrus.

Loot taken in the burglaries included automobile accessories, tires and batteries, all of which was divided among the gang and then disposed of individually, they told officers.

Remy said the holdups, latest of which occurred Monday night, included three filling stations, which netted the youths about $35.

They admitted holding up a filling station on U. S. route 40, east of Columbus, about six weeks ago, and robbing the attendant of $5. On July 7, they told officers, they held up and robbed a station near West Salem on U. S. route 42 of $18.

The third stickup, occurred Monday night at Wakeman in which the youths said they obtained only $12, although Huron county authorities reported the loss at $30.

The trio named as ringleader of the gang, a filling station operator whom they said owned the automobile and was the gunman who robbed the attendants.

Detectives said they had recovered a small caliber pistol in the filling station operated by one of the youths.

The automobile, used by the gang, and repossessed Tuesday by the finance company, was one of the city's old police cruisers, traded in on a new car earlier this year

Enemy planes also were reported over Wales this afternoon. One German was shot down when British planes intervened yesterday in another attack by four enemy aircraft on trawlers, the air ministry said.

Meanwhile, British military men, looking beyond these persistent raids and the approaching battle for Britain, are preparing for "the day" when they say their troops will launch a counter-offensive against Germany.

CHAPTER XXXI

On invitation, Sue had said she would be delighted to spend the night at the trading post. She stood now before the upstairs fireplace in a pair of Rosemary's ultra-dainty pajamas.

"They're a little short on you, I'll admit!" Rosemary laughed at her friend. "But they are the best I can offer. Unless I have an idea, Sue!"

"What?"

"I'll go down and borrow one of Pola's voluminous paleface nightgowns! Made of flour sacks!"

Sue snatched a pillow and threw it. Rosemary ducked.

For two or three minutes they had a lively scrap and tussle as the girls in a sorority house might do, and perhaps would have kept on indefinitely if Cissy, the pet panther, hadn't come out of her corner and glared in protest. Both girls stopped to pet her while they laughed. Then they sat down on cusions before the blazing fire, hugged their knees up to their chests and relaxed in sheer comradely pleasure. Rosemary stuck some marshmallows on a long toasting fork before she spoke again.

"Why weren't you at the CCC dance, Susie?"

"Hunh? Oh."

"Why didn't you come. It was a lot of fun!"

Sue did not answer immediately. The truth was, she hadn't been asked. For months Bob King had taken her everywhere and it was only natural that the other men of the vicinity expected Bob to bring her this time. And so Sue, surely one of the prettiest of all the girls in Arizona, had been left flat at home!

"I couldn't go; had to work for daddy," Sue fibbed.

"I'm sorry."

"Did—did Monty go? I was afraid maybe he wouldn't feel welcome if somebody didn't specifically invite him. But nobody was invited that way, you see."

"He wasn't there," Rosemary said. "Some one should have told him. Urged him to go. He's so sweet!"

Sue looked quickly at her friend, but Rosemary was staring into the blaze, turning the marshmallow fork with its batch of puffing, crisping sweets. The light gave a theatrical glow that emphasized Rosemary's delightful youth and physical charm.

"You are beautiful, honey," Sue said, simply, in genuine admiration. "I hope you are happy always."

"Why—thanks, Sue dear! But so are you beautiful, and so must he happy, too. I am happy, except for little things like—I mean, personal things like my brother Jack. But out here everybody is so kind! I never dreamed Arizona was like that. I came into the state in a sensational manner — pulling a man from a mountain stream—and he turned out to be such a gentleman and all! And—"

"May I remind you, missy, that he was a New Yorker? Like yourself."

"Oh. That's right, he is. Was, I mean. Well—well, heck, Sue, I guess it doesn't matter where you are, there are both good and bad people. It's just — circumstance or something—that makes sets of friends, and all."

Sue swung around on her pillow to face the smaller girl, licking her fingers of marshmallow now as she spoke.

"Rosemary, do you know something? Monty Montgomery is more than a friend of yours. That man is crazy about you. In love with you!"

"Sue!"

"Honey, he is! I know he is!"

Rosemary didn't say anything for quite a long minute. She just sat contemplating that.

* * *

The thought had never occurred to her. Monty in love with her! It was almost funny. He was so—so precise. And formal at times. And shy. But, come to think of it, he had been at her side almost constantly and he certainly had done more things for her than she had any right to expect of any man friend.

"I think he's a dear, Sue, but as for love——"

"I can see and you can't. You—Rosemary, you—you're in love with Bob King, you said. So I suppose that blinds you to everything else." Sue turned back to the fire. "But it really is touching to see the way Monty practically worships the ground you walk on. If he were a little bit younger I bet he'd take to writing poetry. Hasn't he said anything? I mean, hasn't he spoken to you at all about love? I should think even as courteous and shy as he is, he would have revealed something that——"

"Well, no, Sue, he hasn't. Or if he did I was blind. But you see, he knows. I told him about Bob."

"You did?"

"Uhm huhm."

It was Sue's turn to be silent for quite a while then, and Rosemary had her own thoughts for the moment too. Finally Sue asked another direct question.

"Do you honest and truly love Bob King, Rosemary?"

Rosemary's mouth dropped open.

"I mean, you never talk about him very much, is all." Sue was a trifle alarmed, wondering if she had perchance revealed something of her own heart. She had sworn to herself to aid Sue and Bob in every way, but the decision had been a hard one. She looked at the blaze, carefully avoiding Rosemary's eyes.

"Oh. I see what you mean," Rosemary said. "I did tell you I was in love with him. Well—I—I suppose I am, Sue, honey. He is a gallant sort, and handsome!"

"Yes," admitted Sue.

"Funny you would see that Monty loved me, however. I kind of half believe you may be right."

"I know I am!"

"Did he say so? . . . Did he?"

"No. No, of course not. Monty wouldn't. Especially if you had told him about loving Bob. Monty is a very considerate person. It wouldn't be like him to act babyish or boorish if he were really concerned for your happiness, Rosemary."

"That's true. That's certainly true! Monty is so fine. . . . Sue, consideration for others really is a mark of gentility, isn't it?"

"Of course. Why?"

"Well, I just hadn't thought much about it. In a big city people seem so cross at times. Everybody pushes for himself, scrapping and snarling and all. I imagine they don't mean it, but it's not like the people out west."

"I guess I don't know how you mean. How do you mean, pushing and scrapping and snarling?"

"Haven't you been in a city, Sue?"

"I've been to Phoenix. And to Los Angeles for a football game."

I mean lived in a city any? Worked there?"

"No. It's been forests for me, all my days. Daddy is an old ranger."

Rosemary sighed. "I envy you a lot. I know some fine city friends, but the poor dears act nervous all the time. Restless, and on edge. Even Monty was a little that way and he has just been teaching in college. He hasn't actually lived in New York much lately, however. And have you noticed how he takes to the people out here, Sue?"

Sue nodded. "He won them with his lecture. People respect him, daddy says. The Flagstaff College trustees want him to join their faculty, but they can't afford——"

"They do? . . . Honest?"

"Sure! But it doesn't mean anything. They couldn't pay him what Yale can, and anyway he says he has revived an active interest in business rather than archaeology. He taught business administration or something like that once, didn't he? I guess it's because he has been working some for you, reorganizing your store. But that's about over now, isn't it?"

"I suppose so. But I'll be lost without him!"

Sue smiled wryly. "Well, you can have him around your neck forever if you want him! I told you that."

"Stop teasing, Sue. Wouldn't you like something else to eat? A sandwich? Anything?"

She stood up, looking at her friend.

"No thanks, but I am thirsty."

"Let me put on some more wood . . . and then . . . I'll get ——" she spoke as she rumaged in the wood box. In a moment the blaze was brightening and crackling in renewed life, sparking the room so as to arouse slumbering Cissy again and illuminate the pretty bedspread and curtains and Navajo rugs and wall hangings and all the intimate girly things Rosemary had collected there. It was a darling room, and Sue told her so again.

"I have it!" Rosemary suddenly exclaimed. "I'll pop downstairs for some soda pop. In the big refrigerator. Wait jest a sec."

She was gone instantly, and Sue toasted her toes while she waited. The soda water would be good but chilling, and so the fire was doubly welcome now. Then Rosemary tripped back up the stairs.

"Gee golly, Susie, I forgot I had a big box of candy down there on ice! The most wonderful chocolates! Five pounds of them, too! Bob gave them to me this evening. Look!"

Sue looked. And her eyes opened wide. All at once she showed a big smile of wonderment as she gazed at her friend.

"Well I'll be!" she exclaimed. "Rosemary, there's something funny in Denmark. You know old Pop Downey in town? In Flagstaff? He's the old-timer who clerks in the corner pharmacy. Well, he's an old gossip, too, and he told me something. He has petted me for years. Look, this box is called 'Sweetheart Dreams!' It's very expensive. Pop said it was the only one like it they'd ever had, and that Monty Montgomery came in and bought it at midnight for his own girl!"

RECEIVES FUNDS

Mansfield will receive $11,425 in a distribution of state gasoline excise tax funds to cities in Ohio within the next few days, State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson said today.

The funds, which will be allocated from tax collections totaling $1,423,061, will be used to finance street maintenance operations.

TELLS FARMERS HOW TO KEEP LIVESTOCK FROM SUN STROKE

While Richland county farmers have had little trouble so far this summer with animals wilting in the heat, the American Foundation for Animal Health issued eight pointers today to help farmers save their livestock from needless suffering and heat stroke.

Here are the suggestions of the Foundation's veterinarians:

Keep all livestock supplied with plenty of clean, cool water.

Do not allow work horses to drink until they have cooled off.

Be sure artificial shade of some kind is provided if pasture does not have trees.

Avoid feeding too much heating gram such as corn in excessively hot weather.

If a horse stops perspiring, pants excessively, or shows a tendency to stagger, stop working him immediately and call a veterinarian. These are signs of heat stroke or sun stroke and may prove fatal.

Wash horses' shoulders and necks with strong salt water at the end of the days' work. Working a horse with collar sores may ruin a valuable animal.

Hogs do not perspire hence they suffer from heat more than other animals. Be sure they have shade and clean water.

Keep horses out of low pastures during sleeping sickness season, unless they have been vaccinated against the disease.

RATINGS CLASH.

BERKELEY, Cal. —(U.P.)— A student survey conducted by Egon Brunswick, professor of psychology at the University of California, revealed that, while women rate themselves higher in intelligence than attractiveness, men rate them exactly opposite.

Why Object To Wallace?

THE BATTLE LINES can now be drawn, with the Democratic party selecting Henry Agard Wallace as the ticket mate for third term-seeking President Roosevelt against the Willkie-McNary Republican ticket.

The pressure that was applied to the Democratic convention in Chicago last night by Roosevelt for the nomination of Wallace was obvious—as was the reluctance of a goodly portion of the convention to vote it.

But the spirited campaigns on behalf of other vice presidential candidates—Bankhead, McNutt and others bogged down under the unrelenting New Deal managers.

Why the convention should balk at the selection of Wallace—even though he was once a Republican—when President Roosevelt wanted him is difficult to understand.

Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois put it appropriately. "If this were a free and open convention," he said, he might have actively sought the vice presidential nomination.

But it obviously was not a "free and open" convention. It had drafted Roosevelt, who had said he was not a candidate. It could do no less, then, than to give him the man he wanted for vice president.

The convention had denied itself any right to exercise its will.

Regardless of his apparent unpopularity with some of the delegates, Wallace is an earnest and hard fighter for what he believes to be right.

And against the formidable opposition of Willkie and McNary, and in view of the fact that the president himself will have little time for campaigning, the Democrats will need someone who can carry the weight of the campaign.

Delayed as it was, President Roosevelt's address to the convention was logical and creditable. No one can doubt his sincerity of purpose or that he will serve, if elected, with the best of his ability. Whether the nation thinks his ability superior to that of his opponent is a question for November.

Mrs. Roosevelt, addressing the delegates in person, was at her best.

But that outburst from Francis W. Durbin of Lima could have been left out of the picture and no one would have missed it. The subtle sarcasm of Charles Sawyer, Ohio delegation chairman, in putting Durbin in his place was entirely deserved.

The Burma Road Gamble

GREAT BRITAIN has been fighting, or warding off a fight, on too many fronts. It must now try to eliminate some of its problems in distant places where it is unable to muster the strength needed to hold control. That is the explanation of the decision to close the Burma road for three months. It is a tragic decision for China. The Burma road is the last remaining major route over which that country can get needed war materials. The British government bases its action on the provision that Japan use the three months to seek a peace settlement with China.

To many Americans this looks like another dangerous appeasement measure, especially since Japan brought Great Britain to it by threatening otherwise to co-operate more closely with Germany, Italy and Russia in the European grab-festival.

It seems to have been proved beyond question that appeasement does not work with an authoritarian regime. British concession in regard to the Burma road may only lead to other dangerous concessions.

There is hope, however, that Germany may not conquer Britain quickly, or at all, that a reversal may come in the European trend. If Hitler were really slowed down and threatened with defeat, Japan and the other imitators of the Nazi method would slow down, too. China, the latest victim of appeasement, might then have more chance than the recently submerged European countries of overpowering her conquerors and absorbing them. Her vast size and huge population might be able to do this better if active warfare were ended than under prolonged fighting.

Cuban Election

IT WAS a fairly quiet in Cuba, with no more than "routine exuberance" in the way of rough stuff. Four persons were killed and 25 wounded, a few election booths were burned, some telephone wires were cut, a couple of bridges were wrecked, and a few trees were felled across highways. Considering the Latin penchant for revolution, it was only a little worse than an old-fashioned Halloween celebration in the U. S. A.

The outcome of the voting and excitement was a victory for Fulgencio Batista. He has moved up from dictator to elected president. It was his first popular endorsement by the process of voting. He came into power in 1933 by the revolutionary method, when he seized military and civil power with the help of a few co-operating sergeants.

Even though the voting was more violent than we'd choose, it was in the Cuban tradition, not yet outgrown. An interesting sidelight is the report that women, dressed in their Sunday finery, outnumbered men 5 to 1 in early arrivals at the polls. We don't see why the Cuban women—any more than women here—approve of election by intimidation and gunplay. If they can stir their men more to voting, they may reform the Cuban political practice.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK Last week we told you something about a black cat named Friday and a white pup named Thursday of which we are very fond. But we made no mention of Cynthia-Ann, who is called Tin for short, because it really wasn't Tin's story, for one thing, and our space was running short for another.

But Cynthia composes the triumvirate at our house. She is 13 years old and a fine old battle-ax she is. Cynthia is a persian-angora that I have had ever since she was five weeks old.

She tolerates Thursday and Friday but does not accept them. She is grumpy at times and not given to nonsense, which is her right. Because she has missed death by dogs, lightning and pneumonia too many times to have much faith in hoodlums who would make her life miserable if she didn't turn on them now and then and administer a good whipping.

There is one thing about Cynthia that puzzles people at times, especially people who know and understand cats. Her tail seems a little short for her body. Not long ago a guest at our house, while rationing out some catnip, turned around and said, "Say, this cat has an awfully short tail, hasn't she?"

The answer is, yes. Cynthia's tail is short. About two or three inches shorter than it used to be or has any right to be. It was an accident, just one of those strange things that sometimes happen to cats in houses where live newspapermen who go out without bothering to close the door behind them.

One day a big wind sprang suddenly up and caught hold of the door and slammed it shut just as Cynthia was passing out of the door. The force of that slammed door pinched off her tail . . . it pinched off a good two inches of the plume . . . You never saw such a tail as Cynthia's . . . Or heard such an agonized shriek as she let out when the door caught her . . . Well, I administered a little first aid, which was all right in a little while, and between me and a big saucer of juicy red salmon, we made her forget all about her shorn tip.

Then I picked up the end of her tail and took it upstairs. Next day, when I came back from the office, it was still there. So I tied a string around it and hung it on my tie-rack, and it's still there . . . It's been danging from the rack with my neckties for nearly three years.

Most people seldom realize that the personalities of cats are far more distinctive than those of dogs. As a matter of fact, I never saw two cats that were alike in any way, yet I have owned dogs with the sameness of peas.

Our cats don't even speak the same language. One craves fish and fowl, the other red meat. One goes out only at night; the other will go out night or day. When they sing, they sing in different keys. Friday enjoys a prowl in the rain. Cynthia wouldn't be caught dead in even the faintest suggestion of a summer shower. One of our cats likes snow. The other shudders at the thought of snow.

On the other hand, dogs usually like what you like. They will follow you through rain and fog. This isn't because they are more faithful than other animals. They just don't give a hoot whether they get their feet muddy or not.

Chicago Needs Lot of Explaining

—By JACK STINNETT

CHICAGO—Looking back on the early days of the Chicago convention, I can say honestly that neither I, pretty much a freshman in the field of politics, nor any of my seniors ever saw anything like it. When the last chapter in the history of American politics is written, the conventions of 1940 will take a lot of explaining.

At Philadelphia, it was because a recent political change-coat, Wendell L. Willkie, walked in and ran off with the nomination while old-line Republicans gasped for breath and cried for time to catch up with the march of amazing events.

In Chicago, it was because the silence of "the man who wasn't there" left everybody in a state of utter confusion.

'Sweeping' the Convention.

FOR a columnist to weep for words is heresy . . . but I haven't the verbal left jabs and right hooks to explain the consternation into which the Chicago convention was thrown by the silence of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Nevertheless, with this little perspective, I'm going to try to put it down.

Let's take the press first. Far be it from me to turn on my journalistic brothers. Whenever I want the facts in a case and want them right, I go to the newsmen. There have been times when they were baffled, as, for example, what happened to Judge Carter . . . but nine times out of 10, biased aside, they know more than they are able to get into print. Good taste, journalistic integrity, editorial policy demands, and other factors sometimes forbid putting down every guess and calculation, but they very rarely forbid putting down the known and tenable facts.

But what happened in Chicago? In the course of 48 hours, I saw John N. Garner, Burton K. Wheeler, Paul V. McNutt, Cordell Hull, and James A. Farley announced very solemnly as "sweeping the convention" in a drive for the presidential nomination.

I heard all of these, plus Governor Lloyd Stark of Missouri, Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, Senator "Jimmy" Byrnes, William O. Douglas, of the supreme court, Attorney General "Bob" Jackson, boomed as Roosevelt's definite selection as a running mate.

They Didn't Know.

THROUGH it all, I talked to Byrnes, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, and Frank Walker of New York, all Roosevelt liaison men. I talked to McNutt, Farley and Wheeler. It wasn't that they wouldn't tell. They just didn't know. All were certain Roosevelt would run again if he were nominated by an overwhelming vote, but more than that they didn't know. The confusion of these men was too real to be similated. Whom did he want for vice-president? What else? The answer: Blank.

What was the man who wasn't there waiting for? Why didn't he say what he wanted? He, although absent, was running the convention and everybody knew it. Some of them guessed that Roosevelt wanted to know by what overwhelming majority he was wanted by his party. Until that offer was made, how could he say?

In the light of events this certainly was a pretty true picture of the situation, but if it ever has happened before . . . if it ever left more delegates to a national convention out on a limb for so long, I've failed to find any trace of it in the record.

Perhaps I can sum it up. Wandering around the lobby of the Stevens hotel one night, I ran across an old friend. He was a member of the national committee, a politician of many years though he had never run for office. He was haggard, insomnia-ridden, almost hysterical. What he said was:

"I don't know, Jack. I don't know a damned thing. Why, oh why, doesn't some one give us our orders and let us get some sleep?"

Listen, World!

Don't Hoard Your Hurts.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I WAS SCARED: Shivering down to the toes of my beautiful, new, white shoes.

Outside, the wild canaries flashed in a sudden, golden glitter through the gray-green veil of the pepper trees . . . perfume spread in warm, fragrant waves from the tangle of honeysuckle, heliotrope and "ragged Robin" roses . . . sunshine fell, in golden-motted shafts, through the window of the little, frontier church. But, for once, no answering delight awoke in my young heart. I was involved in far too serious business. I was Going To Join the Church!

Now, I had wanted to join the church. It had been my other home since babyhood. Besides, the Other Girls were going to. And Mother would make me a wonderful white dress like theirs. Moreover, though I had no words to define it, there was a strange, allaring mystery about the whole affair. Something calling. Something I could not understand but felt I must answer. Felt life would be incomplete unless it were answered.

And so I had listened dutifully to all the preliminaries. Heard, as if it were a fairy tale, the puzzling, unreal story of those last hours in that "upper room" where the young Christ, who was so soon to die, observed the Passover with those who'd walked His trail. Heard how He had broken bread . . . and poured the wine . . . and said:

Eat . . . drink . . . in memory of me . . . This is my body . . . given for you . . . This is my blood . . . take this and divide it among yourselves . . ."

Strange words. I'd listened to them a hundred times, dreamily, as a child listens. Taken them without question. Now, suddenly, looking at the waiting loaf and cup, they took on a terrible life! I didn't—I didn't—want to drink someone's blood or eat His body! What was it all about? Why . . . why . . .

Then, suddenly, the cup was at my frightened lips. I had taken it. Round-eyed with horror, I waited for the miracle to happen . . . But there was no miracle . . . Just the familiar sights I had so often seen. Old Mrs. Harkins, sitting in a dark corner, weeping quietly for her little dead girl. Young Mr. Felton, who everybody said was a black sheep, looking ashamed and lonely beside his grim mother. Poor, pretty Ida Wilson, whose husband was almost never home, sitting straight and white-faced, but with a strange quiet in her shadowed eyes.

Just the same faces, seen through a mystery I could not understand. Faces that had always seemed so old and apart. But now, amazingly, they seemed new and near. I still could not fathom what lay behind their pale, strained masks. But we had drunk from the same cup. I wasn't just a little girl any more . . . I was part of older people, strange people . . . part of everyone.

To be part of everyone. To drink "in remembrance of Him" out of the common cup of misery. To "divide" whatever came, and, by dividing, lessen one's own fear and grief. I did not know then that this was the meaning of the sacrament. I did not realize that we all must break the same rough bread of human experience . . . and share the same sour wine of human agony . . . before we can know ourselves or our brothers—or Him. But I had glimpsed the beginning of the wonder when I lost my own fear in that sudden nearness to those faces which had once seemed strange.

There's fear now, such as most of us never imagined before. Pain and loss and looming hardship that seem to darken our individual lives. Don't let them? Don't drink your cup or break your bread alone. Don't hoard your hurts. Divide them! Realize they are part of the common lot. Eat and drink with your neighbor . . . share your pain with his . . . and be comforted. In memory of Him who shared His all upon a cross.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Seventh Heaven."

Figurative for supreme happiness, "seventh heaven," which was used as the name of a famous popular play, is rooted in the religious conceptions of thousands of years ago.

The allusion is to the ancient beliefs of the Cabalist wing of the traditional Jews and Mohammedans in a plurality of heavens, with the seventh as their summit.

The Cabalists span fine theories about each heaven, how one rose in joy above the other, culminating in the seventh, zenith of bliss, the abode of God and domicile of the highest ranking angels of them all.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

CHICAGO—There was only one other person present when the president heard the first speech made at the convention nominating him for a third term.

The visitor was Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Arkansas' witty, motherly U. S. senator, who entered his White House office for a conference just as Mayor Ed Kelly was starting his address of welcome. In this, Kelly declared that he knew Roosevelt did not want to run, but that he should be drafted anyway.

The president was getting the speech from a small portable radio on his desk. As Mrs. Caraway entered he greeted her with a smile, motioned to a chair and toned down the radio.

From then on he listened in grave silence. When Kelly declared that Roosevelt had to be drafted to "save the heart of humanity," the president's face became solemn. Then as Kelly continued, Roosevelt seemed to sink deeper and deeper into himself.

Once or twice he glanced at Mrs. Caraway, but his face was inscrutable. It was impossible to tell what he was thinking.

But as Kelly drew to a close, the president's mood lifted and when the Chicago mayor finished, Roosevelt smiled, threw back his head and said, "Well, the mayor is getting to be quite an orator."

That was all. Mrs. Caraway asked no questions about the convention and the president volunteered nothing.

Note—The day the convention opened, Mrs. Roosevelt told an old friend that she was reconciled to the president running again. "If he has to do it," she said, "then there is nothing else to do. I know he doesn't want to run, but there seems to be no alternative."

White House Pipe-Line.

From the moment Harry Hopkins landed here last week and that open wire was set up between his suite 308-10 in the Blackstone hotel and the White House, the president has been minutely informed of everything that has happened. From early morning until late at night the wire has buzzed with reports to Washington.

Roosevelt leaders have kept him informed of what was being said and rumored in the hotel lobbies. It's not an exaggeration to say that the president, a thousand miles from the convention, probably knows more about it than 99.9 per cent of those here on the ground.

And some of the politicos are in for a shock when they learn that certain cracks they thought they were making in private are tucked away in Roosevelt's retentive memory.

Whatever else the third-term organization may have lacked, it was good on "intelligence." Every delegation and headquarters was "covered" by a friendly contact who kept Hopkins and his lieutenants advised of inside developments.

Stagnant Convention.

It was a good thing that they were, too. For with time dragging on their hands, delegates seized every rumor and promptly spilled it to the press.

If administration leaders could have had their way, they would have condensed the convention into three days and wound it up by Wednesday. They even discussed doing this, but when it got to Jim Farley he promptly put down his foot. Bent on forcing a roll-call in order to have himself placed in nomination, Jim warned that he would fight any attempt to short-circuit the convention.

The administrationites couldn't risk an open row, so they had to absorb the opposition's brickbats and make the best of it. But it burned them up, and there are a lot of private scores to be settled later.

Note—One Roosevelt leader, urging Farley to forget his grievances and remain as national chairman, said: "Jim, if you quit, the public will forget all about you in six months."

"That's okay with me," shot back Farley. "When I qui, as chairman, I want to be forgotten."

McNutt Tickets.

Apparently the managers of Paul McNutt are strong believers in the old adage, "The Lord helps those who help themselves."

Like others not in the good graces of the moguls of the Democratic national committee, the Indianans got only a fraction of the convention tickets they wanted. But, unlike the others, they didn't let that stop them.

One of the McNutt lieutenants was in charge of a convention hall entrance. So the boys quietly had 10,000 "special" tickets printed, with instructions to present them at this particular gate. They were distributed widely to the folks from Indiana, and the scheme worked for a while. Then Jim Farley got wind of the matter and ordered new guards at the entrance.

Chicago-Go-Round.

One person who had a special reason for welcoming a third-term nomination for the president was Gov. Carl Bailey of Arkansas. He is running for a third term himself and figured Roosevelt's candidacy would help his own. Arkansas has had only one three-time governor: Jeff Davis some 50 years ago. . . . Genial Bill Howes, former first assistant postmaster general, has been Democratic national committeeman from South Dakota for 17 years; the fourth oldest in length of service in the party. . . . Wordy Senator Worth Clark, whose isolationist stand hasn't set well with Idaho Democrats, was soundly trounced in the state's delegation, which elected an anti-Clark chairman, national committeeman, and committeewoman. . . . Hardest working committee of the convention was the platform committee, which Senator Wagner, chairman, kept in session all one night to finish its work.

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

The Peace I Know.

You might not wish the peace I know,
To you monotonous
Might seem days just of meals to get,
The cleaning of the muss

That husband and the children leave;
Days that begin with bed
To make and marketing to do
That hunger shall be fed.

A woman who has never lived
This life could never know
The peace it holds from needs supplied
Of food, of love's dear glow.

Yet it has such a peace that all
Which goes by that high name,
In light of it, is paltry, small,
And more, is put to shame.

A Farmer's Diary

Morning, Noon and Night.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

FOR A WHILE before dawn the dark was close, impenetrable, still.

Then all at once I could see the white porch pillars, out the window. I rose on one elbow. The horizon showed, black against white. Slowly, up the eastern sky, light was moving, growing, overflowing the valley. Far off a rooster crowed. Our own fowls answered him.

In his crib the baby stirred. I rose and tucked a blanket around him for the air came through the window, cool and damp. It smelled of woods and harvest fields and dew-wet clover. Along the eastern sky rosy streaks of dawn; from up the wooded slope the murmur of awaking birds; far off the bark of a dog rounding up the neighbor's cows. . . .

By noon the sun was hot. The blue sky was piled at the edges with soft white clouds. Beneath the apple tree along the pond, the chickens preened and panted. The goats had stretched themselves full length in the grass at the end of their tethers; a hot breeze stirred the holly hocks. I went to the spring for a dipper of cool water and stood in the grateful shade of the little wild cherry while I drank deep and long. . . .

From beneath our maples the children and I watched the sun drop behind the hills. A few long clouds were radiant gold and taupe. Far to the north and south, old rose melted into blue. A flock of cloud bloated through a sea of golden glow. The valley sun sank least jewel largely for a moment upon the hilltop and sank behind the rim of trees.

Long shadows crept down the valley. Brilliant streaks of scarlet, up the sky, shortened and dimmed. Day was "dying in the west." We softly sang the chorus, the children's voices joining, high and sweet. A lump was in our throat.

Twilight came, that softly transient season of loneliness between the day and night. A vesper sparrow sang—a barn owl called—a star came twinkling out. Fireflies glimmered up and down the valley. The littlest tot cuddled sleepily down beside me. The others paused from their chatter to listen for an approaching car and sigh as it drove on past.

Then, tiredly, we went indoors to light the coal oil lamp.

MAKES APPEAL TO REASON OF ENGLISH FOES

Hitler Offers British Peace; Warns of Destruction of World Empire.

destroyed" unless England listens to "reason."

Churchill, he said, may think that it is Germany which faces destruction.

"I know it will be England," he asserted.

Hitler told the German reichstag that he had summoned them to give the German people an insight into the developments of the European war.

The conditions imposed at Versailles, he said, were impossible and proposed the annihilation of the German state.

He then reviewed the terms of the Versailles treaty and pointed out how Germany could not accept them beyond the smallest possible time.

"The program of the Nationalist Socialist movement proclaimed to the world our determination to shake off the shackles of this treaty," he declared.

The German government was pleased, he went on, that in the early revisions of the treaty no war resulted.

He assailed "Jewish capitalist war-mongers," blaming them for the war.

"No other statesman dared to propose a solution such as mine to the German nation," he said.

"On Sept. 2, the conflict might have been averted. Mussolini made a proposal for peaceful negotiations * * * it was only the British war-mongers who wanted war."

On June 19th, 1940, a German soldier found a "strange document" which led to other documents of the supreme Allied war council, he said.

These documents had marginal notes which gave "remarkable evidence" of the plans of the "war-mongers." They showed, Hitler said, that the British and French planned to use the small countries to their own ends.

Finland, the Balkan states and Belgium were among these nations which were to be used for their own purposes, Hitler said.

"These same criminals were responsible for leading Poland into war," he declared.

He recalled he had "warned" Britain and France after the Polish campaign "not to continue this war."

He said he was "abused" as a coward because of these peace proposals; thus this "capitalist clique of war-mongers, with a personal stake in the war" caused the conflict to continue.

"While this Anglo-French war clique was seeking ways to extend the war and rope in new participants, I was working to build up our own forces.

Along about March we learned of intentions by the Allies to get bases in Finland for movement into the Balkans and to obtain access to Swedish and Norwegian mines.

The conclusion of peace between Russia and Finland caused these intentions by the Allies to be temporarily withheld."

However, plans were taken up by the Allies a few days later, Hitler said, to pursue the northern campaign. Germany learned of the plans, he declared, because of the "verbosity of that first lord of the admiralty (Winston Churchill) now British premier and French Premier Reynaud.

The dispatch of minelayers to Norwegian waters, he said removed any doubt of the British intention to occupy Norway.

He then reviewed the opening of the conflict in Norway. He said Germany moved in only after the British had tried in vain.

"Successful execution was possible only by the fine work of the three divisions of our forces, the navy, land forces and air force.

"The air force, which was often the only means of transport, surpassed itself in every respect.

"The British fleet was finally obliged to yield before the attacks of German dive bombers and evacuate * * *"

"Air-landed troops," he said, provided the first occupation of many places. He paid tribute to Norwegian [illegible]

[illegible] troops, assembled [illegible] poorly trained and [illegible] and definitely inferior [illegible] respect."

"The word [illegible] will be immortalized as a [illegible] National Socialist [illegible]

Here's Text of President's Radio Address Accepting Dem Nomination for Third Term

WASHINGTON—(AP) Following is the text of President Roosevelt's speech to the Democratic national convention.

It is with a very full heart that I speak tonight. I must confess that I do so with mixed feelings because I find myself, as almost everyone does sooner or later in his lifetime, in a conflict between deep personal desire for retirement on the one hand, and that quiet, invisible thing called "conscience" on the other.

Because there are self-appointed commentators and interpreters who will seek to misinterpret or question motives, I speak in a somewhat personal vein; and I must trust to the good faith and common sense of the American people to accept my own good faith—and to do their own interpreting.

When, in 1936, I was chosen by the voters for a second time as president, it was my firm intention to turn over the responsibilities of government to other hands at the end of my term. That conviction remained with me. Eight years in the presidency, following a period of bleak depression, and covering one world crisis after another, would normally entitle any man to the relaxation which comes from honorable retirement.

During the spring of 1939 world events made it clear to all but the blind or the partisan that a great war in Europe had become not merely a possibility but a probability, and that such a war would of necessity deeply affect the future of this nation.

When the conflict first broke out last September, it was still my intention to announce clearly and simply, at an early date, that under no conditions would I accept reelection. This fact was well known to my friends, and I think was understood by many citizens.

It soon became evident, however, that such a public statement on my part would be unwise from the point of view of sheer public duty. As president of the United States, it was my clear duty, with the aid of congress, to preserve our neutrality, to shape our program of defense to meet rapid changes, to keep our domestic affairs adjusted to shifting world conditions, and to sustain the policy of the good neighbor.

It was also my obvious duty to maintain to the utmost the influence of this mighty nation in our effort to prevent the spread of war, and to sustain by all legal means, those governments threatened by other governments which had rejected the principles of democracy.

Swiftly moving foreign events made necessary swift action at home and beyond the seas. Plans for national defense had to be expanded and adjusted to meet new forms of warfare. American citizens and their welfare had to be safeguarded in many foreign zones of danger. National unity in the United States became a crying essential in the face of the development of unbelievable types of espionage and international treachery.

Every day that passed called for the postponement of personal plans and partisan debate until the last possible moment. The normal conditions under which I would have made public declaration of my personal desires were wholly gone.

Thinking solely of the national good and of the international scene, I came to the reluctant conclusion that such declaration should not be made before the national convention. It was accordingly made to you within an hour after the permanent organization of this convention.

Like any other man, I am complimented by the honor that you have done me. But I know you will understand the spirit in which I say that no call or party alone would prevail upon me to accept re-election to the presidency.

The real decision to be made in these circumstances is not the acceptance of a nomination, but rather an ultimate willingness to serve if chosen by the electorate of the United States. Many considerations enter into this decision.

During the past few months, with due congressional approval, we in the United States have been taking steps to implement the total defense of America. I cannot urge that in carrying out this program I have drafted into the service of the nation many men and women, taking them away from important private affairs, calling them suddenly from their homes and their businesses. I have asked them to leave their own work, and to contribute their skill and experience to the cause of their nation.

I, as the head of their government, have asked them to do this. Regardless of party, regardless of personal convenience, they came. They answered the call. Every single one of them, with one exception, has come to the nation's capital to serve the nation.

These people, who have placed patriotism above all else, represent those who have made their way to what might be called the top of their professions or industries through proven skill and experience.

But they alone could not be relied to meet the needs of the times.

[illegible] personnel [illegible] alone [illegible] the most [illegible] of modern warfare is really [illegible] sufficient [illegible] so also [illegible] and tanks are [illegible] but they are only [illegible] by the power of men [illegible]

[illegible] only of pilots and gunners [illegible] infantry [illegible] who operate tanks. For every individual in actual combat service, it is necessary for adequate defense that we have ready at hand at least four or five other trained individuals organized for non-combat services.

And because of the millions of citizens involved in the conduct of defense, most right thinking persons are agreed that some form of selection by draft is as necessary and as fair today as it was in 1917 and 1918.

Nearly every American is willing to do his share or her share to defend the United States. It is neither just nor efficient to permit that task to fall upon any one section or any one group. For every section and every group depend for their existence upon the survival of the nation as a whole.

Lying awake, as I have, on many nights, I have asked myself whether I have the right, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, to call on men and women to serve their country or to train themselves to serve and, at the same time, decline to serve my country in my personal capacity, if I am called upon to do so by the people of my country.

In times like these—in times of great tension, of great crisis—the compass of the world narrows to a single fact. The fact which dominates our world is the fact of armed aggression, the fact of successful armed aggression, aimed at the form of government, the kind of society that we in the United States have chosen and established for ourselves. It is a fact which no one any longer doubts—which no one is any longer able to ignore.

It is not an ordinary war. It is a revolution imposed by force of arms, which threatens all men everywhere. It is a revolution which proposes not to set men free but to reduce them to slavery—to reduce them to slavery in the interest of dictatorship which has already shown the nature and the extent of that advantage which it hopes to obtain.

That is the fact which dominates our world and which dominates the lives of all of us—each and every one of us. In the face of the danger which confronts our time, no individual retains or can hope to retain, the right of personal choice which free men enjoy in times of peace. He has a first obligation to serve in the defense of our institutions of freedom—a first obligation to serve his country in whatever capacity his country finds him useful.

Like most men of my age I had made plans for myself, plans for a private life of my own choice and for my own satisfaction—a life of that kind to begin in January, 1941. These plans, like so many other plans, had been made in a world which now seems as distant as another planet. Today all private plans, all private lives have been in a sense repealed by an over-riding public danger. In the face of that public danger all those who can be of service to the republic have no choice but to offer themselves for service in those capacities for which they may be fitted.

Those, my friends, are the reasons why I have had to admit to myself, and now to state to you, that my conscience will not let me turn my back upon a call to service.

The right to make that call rests with the people through the American method of a free election. Only the people themselves can draft a president. If such a draft should be made upon me, I say to you, in the utmost simplicity, I will, with God's help, continue to serve with the best of my ability and with the fullness of my strength.

To you, the delegates to this convention, I express my gratitude for the selection of Henry Wallace for the high office of vice president of the United States.

His first hand knowledge of the problems of government in every sphere of life and in every part of the nation—and indeed of the whole world—qualifies him without reservation. His practical idealism will be of great service to me individually and to the nation as a whole.

And to the chairman of the national committee and postmaster general, my old friend Jim Farley—I send, as I have often before, my affectionate greetings. All of us are sure that he will continue to give all the leadership and support he possibly can to the cause of American democracy.

In some respects, as I think my good wife suggested a few hours ago, the next few months will be different from the usual national campaigns of recent years.

Most of you know how important it is that the president of the United States in these days remain close to the seat of government. Since last summer I have been compelled to abandon proposed journeys to inspect many of our national projects from the Alleghenies to the Pacific coast.

Events move so fast in other parts of the world that it has become my duty to remain either in the White House itself or at some nearby point where I can reach Washington and even Europe and Asia by direct telephone when it is needed. I can be back at my desk in the space of a very few hours. And in addition, the splendid work of the new defense machinery will require me to spend vastly more time in conference with the responsible administrative heads under me. Finally, the added task which the present crisis has imposed also upon the congress compelling them to forego their usual adjournments calls for constant cooperation between the executive and legislative branches to the efficiency of which I am glad indeed now to pay tribute.

I do expect, of course, during the coming months to make my usual periodic reports to the country through the medium of press conferences and radio talks.

I shall not have the time or the inclination to engage in purely political debate. But I shall never be loathe to call the attention of the nation to deliberate or unwitting falsifications of fact, which are sometimes made by political candidates.

I have spoken to you in a very informal and personal way. The exigencies of the day require, however, that I also talk with you about things which transcend any personality and go very deeply to the roots of American civilization.

Our lives have been based on those fundamental freedoms and liberties which we Americans have cherished for a century and a half. The establishment of them and the preservation of them in each succeeding generation have been accomplished through the processes of free elective government—the Democratic-Republican form, based on the representative system and the coordination of the executive, the legislative and the judicial branches.

The task of safeguarding our institutions seems to me to be twofold. One must be accomplished, if it becomes necessary, by the armed defense forces of the nation. The other, by the united effort of the men and women of the country, to make our federal and state and local governments responsive to the growing requirements of modern democracy.

There have been occasions as we remember when reactions in the march of democracy have set in, and forward-looking progress has seemed to stop.

But such periods have been followed by liberal and progressive times which have enabled the nation to catch up with new developments in fulfilling new human needs. Such a time has been the past seven years. Because we had seemed to lag in previous years, we have had to develop, speedily and efficiently, the answers to aspirations which had come from every state and every family in the land.

We have sometimes called it social legislation; we have sometimes called it legislation to end abuses of the past; we have sometimes called it legislation for human security; and we have sometimes called it legislation to better the condition of life of the many millions of our fellow citizens, who could not have the essentials of life or hope for an American standard of living.

Some of us have labeled it a wide and more equitable distribution of wealth in our land. It has included among its aims, to liberalize and broaden the control of vast industries—Lodged today in the hands of a relatively small group of individuals of every great financial power.

But all of these definitions and labels are essentially the expression of one consistent thought. They represent a constantly growing sence of human decency—human decency throughout our nation.

This sense of human decency is happily confined to no group or class. You find it in the humblest home. You find it among those who toil and among the shop keepers and the farmers of the nation. You find it, to a growing degree, even among those who are listed in that top group which has so much control over the industrial and financial structure of the nation. Therefore, this urge of humanity can by no means be labeled a war of class against class. It is rather a war against poverty and suffering and ill-health and insecurity, a war in which all classes are joining in the interest of a sound and enduring democracy.

I do not believe for a moment, and I know you do not believe either, that we have fully answered all of the needs of human security. But we have covered much of the road. I need not catalogue the milestones of seven years. For every individual and every family in the whole land knows that the average of their personal lives has been made safer and sounder and happier than it has ever been before. I do not think they want the gains in these directions to be repealed or even to be placed in the charge of those who would give them mere lip-service with no heart service.

Yes, very much more remains to be done, and I think the voters want the task entrusted to those who believe that the world's "human betterment" apply to poor and rich alike.

And I have a sneaking suspicion, too, that voters will smile at charges of inefficiency against a government which has boldly met the enormous problems of banking, and finance and industry which the great efficiency bankers and industrialists of the Republican party left in such hopeless chaos in the famous year 1933.

But we all know that our progress at home and in the other American nations and our sister nations toward this realization of a better human decency progress along free lines is gravely endangered by what is happening on other continents. In Europe, many nations, through dictatorships or invasions, have been compelled to abandon many human processes. They have been compelled to accept forms of government which seem to [illegible] and efficient.

They are not now my friends, they are only a relapse [illegible] into ancient history. The imminent rulers of the greater part of modern Europe have guaranteed efficiency, and work, and a type of security.

But the slaves who built the pyramids for the glory of the dictator Pharaohs of Egypt had that kind of security, that kind of efficiency, that kind of corporative state.

So did the inhabitants of that world which extended from Britain to Persia under the undisputed rule of the proconsuls sent out from Rome.

So did the henchmen, the tradesmen, the mercenaries and the slaves of the feudal system which dominated Europe who received their kinds and their governments at the whim of the conquering Napoleon.

Whatever its new trappings and new slogans, tyranny is the oldest and most discredited rule known to history. And whenever tyranny has replaced a more human form of government it has been due more to internal causes than external. Democracy can thrive only when it enlists the devotion of those whom Lincoln called the common people. Democracy can hold that devotion only when it adequately respects their dignity by so ordering society as to assure to the masses of men and women reasonable security and hope for themselves and for their children.

We in our democracy, and those who live in still unconquered democracies, will never willingly descend to any form of this so-called security of efficiency which calls for the abandonment of other securities more vital to the dignity of man. It is our credo—unshakable to the end—that we must live under the liberties that were first heralded by Magna Carta and placed into glorious operation through the declaration of independence, the constitution of the United States and the bill of rights.

The government of the United States for the past seven years had had the courage openly to oppose by every peaceful means the spread of the dictator form of government. If our government should pass to other hands next January—untried hands, inexperienced hands—we can merely hope and pray that they will not substitute appeasement and compromise with those who seek to destroy all democracies everywhere, including here.

I would not undo, if I could, the efforts I made to prevent war from the moment it was threatened and to restrict the area of carnage, down to the last minute. I do not now soften the condemnation expressed by Secretary Hull and myself from time to time for the acts of aggression that have wiped out ancient liberty-loving, peace pursuing countries which had scrupulously maintained neutrality. I do not recant the sentiments of sympathy with all free peoples resisting such aggression, or begrudge the material aid that that we have given to them. I do not regret my consistent endeavor to awaken this country of ours to the menace for us and for all we hold dear.

I have pursued these efforts in the face of appeaser fifth columnists who charged me with hysteria and war-mongering.

But I felt it my duty — my simple, plain, inescapable duty —to arouse my countrymen to the danger of the new forces loose in the world.

So long as I am president, I will do all I can to insure that that foreign policy remain our foreign policy.

All that I have done to maintain the peace of this country and to prepare it morally, as well as physically, for whatever contingencies may be in store, I submit to the judgment of my countrymen.

We face one of the great choices of history.

It is not alone a choice of government—government by the people—versus dictatorship.

It is not alone a choice of freedom versus slavery.

It is not alone a choice between moving forward or falling back.

It is all of these rolled into one.

It is the continuance of civilization as we know it versus the ultimate destruction of all that we have held dear—religion against Godlessness; the ideal of justice against the practice of force, moral decency versus the firing squad; courage to speak out, and to act, versus the false lullaby of appeasement.

It has been well said that a selfish and greedy people cannot be free.

The American people must decide whether these things are worth making sacrifices of money, or energy, and of self. They will not decide by listening to mere words or by reading mere pledges, interpretations and claims. They will decide on the record—the record as it has been made—the record of things as they are.

The American people will sustain the progress of a representative democracy, asking the divine blessing as they face the future with courage and with faith.

TWO VACANCIES

Majority of Rural School Posts Filled for Term.

Richland county rural boards of education have only two more teachers to hire for the 1940-41 term unless there are unexpected resignations before September, Boyd Robinson, county superintendent, said today.

Both vacancies are in physical education departments, one at Butler where Coach Royd Hodges resigned and the other at Madison township high school where the board must replace Miss Nellie Reeder, girls' physical education instructor, who quit to be married.

Most of the county teachers were re-employed last spring and there were few vacancies to fill, Robinson said.

The Navesink, N. J., lighthouse, with 9,000,000 candlepower, is the brightest in the United States.

Burke Predicts Dem Bolt to Willkie

SENATOR SAYS MANY OPPOSED TO ROOSEVELT

Reports Californian Suggests Organization Composed of Anti-Third Termers.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Sen. Edward R. Burke, D., Neb., today predicted formation of a national organization of Democrats to support Republican presidential candidate Wendell L. Willkie in protest against a third term for President Roosevelt.

Burke, who bolted the party yesterday, said that his action had brought several telegrams of congratulation and offers to help him creat a Democratic organization to support Willkie. Burke has wired Willkie, offering to enlist "for the duration of the campaign."

One telegram, which Burke showed reporters, came from James W. Mellen, chairman of the Jeffersonian Democrats of California. Mellen suggested that "all our kind of Democrats" meet at some central point to form a national organization similar to his own.

Burke, who was defeated for renomination in the recent Nebraska Democratic primary, said that he had not decided whether he would accept Mellen's offer but declared:

"The many Democrats who feel as I do will undoubtedly get together."

He said that his only communication with Willkie had been a request by the Republican candidate to make the Nebraskan's offer of support public.

THREE HELD

Face Murder Charges After Gunfight; 2 Killed.

PRESTONBURG, Ky. —(NS)— Three men, two of them critically wounded, faced murder charges today following a gunfight which left two men dead last night at a United Mine Workers meeting at Ligon, isolated coal mining camp.

The dead men were Toby Newsome, 15, and his uncle, Creed Newsome, 57. Wounded during the gun battle and removed to a hospital under arrest were Alvis Newsome, 24, and Caleb Newsome, 30, brothers of Toby.

Deputy Sheriff Lecky Salisbury, who said cause of the shooting was being investigated, also held W. M. Dillo, 57, as an alleged participant.

Willkie Brands Roosevelt Speech As 'Interesting'

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col.—(AP)—Wendell Willkie arranged to leave here today for a farm conference at Denver after commenting that President Roosevelt's speech last night was "very, very interesting."

Willkie sat on a couch in his apartment at a Colorado Springs hotel during the president's talk. He chuckled occasionally.

The Republican nominee refused to elaborate his brief statement about Mr. Roosevelt's remarks. He also declined comment on the nomination of Secretary Wallace as vice president.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—A small automobile which its builder claims can carry four soldiers with full field equipment at 50 miles an hour on one gallon of gasoline, was poised for demonstration here today.

Powel Crosley, Jr., designer and head of the Crosley corporation, said the vehicle is powered with an air-cooled, opposed-cylinder type engine.

$800 LEFT FOR FIREWORKS ON 1941'S JULY 4

Parks Association Reports 'Nest Egg' For Starting Next Year's Program.

The Mansfield Public Parks association will close its books on the annual community Fourth of July celebration with approximately $800 left as a "nest egg" for next year's project.

A report on revenue and expenditures was made to members of the association last night at North Lake park pavilion by the treasurer, Floyd Fighter.

The association sponsored the big celebration at the county Fairground with an all day program and a big fireworks display, for the third consecutive year. There was a balance left over from last year of $512, Fighter reported.

To this was added $1,150 in contributions made by Mansfield business concerns and industries, $424 taken in at the concessions and $803 on the sale of seats at the Fairground, making a total revenue of $2,889.

Largest item of expenditures was $1,200 for fireworks. Other expenditures, including several bills yet to be paid, brought the total to $2,089. This will leave $800 with which to start next year's celebration, officials said.

Clerk Advised of Requirements for Travel Passports

United States tourists must have passports now to travel in Bermuda, Panama, and the Dominion republic, Fred R. Zellner, county clerk of courts, had been advised today by the department of immigration.

The department pointed out, however, that tourists who go to the Dominion republic on a cruise, or remain ashore only a few days between ships, are not required to have passports.

Tourists who intend to remain on the island of Haiti more than 30 days also will be required to present properly visaed passports.

The department emphasized that passports are not needed to enter Canada, but United States citizens should be prepared to show their birth or baptismal certificates or any other documents to prove their citizenship. Naturalized citizens will be required to submit their naturalization certificates to get back into this country from Canada.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal.—(NS)—While a group of friends dined downstairs, Miss Ethel Davies, sister of Marion Davies, the motion picture actress, was stricken and died of a heart attack last night in her room in her Beverly Hills home.

TAPPAN PLANT WINS PRAISE IN TRADE PUBLICATION STORY

Nation-wide recognition was given the Tappan Stove company recently by the "Enamelist" widely circulated trade publication which described the company's new $100,000 enameling plant as "one of the best equipped porcelain enamel shops in the world."

The magazine story devoted to describing the enameling plant in detail is complete with pictures of the plant and photographs of the equipment. The publication gives over 12 pages to the story.

Tappan's new enameling quarters constructed at the cost of more than $100,000 was one of the major industrial improvements in Mansfield last year. It was started in the fall and went into operation shortly after the first of this year.

"When officials of the Tappan Stove company decided to build their own enamel plant, they were determined to have, not just a good plant, but one of the best, and that is what they have," the magazine article says.

"It is one of the most modern and best equipped porcelain enameling shops in the country."

It states further "Tappan's new porcelain department is housed in a new, fireproof building especially designed for enameling purposes. There are no overhead trusses to collect dust. The building is of steel and brick construction with insulated steel deck roof."

Tribute was paid Tappan engineers by the writer who points out that the building and equipment layout was designed and engineered by the company's own engineers.

"The ventilating and heating system is quite novel," the article goes on. "All air is taken into the building through self-clearing air filters, then through banks of steam coils, arranged with a system of by-passes, controlled by a room thermostat, and delivered into the room through four blowers."

"The entire room is under pressure, to prevent dirty air from entering except through the ventilating system.

The story also tells of Tappan's pioneering in production of ranges and gives it credit for coming forward from time to time with "firsts" that have been adopted by other manufacturers in the industry."

Among these are the rounded range corners, the first fully insulated gas range, the divided top feature, and glass in oven door feature.

CADDY 'SHAKEDOWN' QUIZ ENDS, JUDGE GIVES WARNING TO BOYS

Investigation of an alleged "shakedown racket" among the caddies at the Possum Run golf course, apparently was closed today after Judge C. J. Anderson warned two more youths employed at the club that any more reports of physical violence or collecting "protection money" would mean "serious trouble" for them.

Judge Anderson issued the warning to four boys about 14 years old who were said to be the "ring leaders" in an attack on Robert Arntz, 14, of 41 Florence avenue, last Sunday.

The Arntz boy, a caddy at the club, was beaten because he failed to pay "dues" to some of the older boys for "protection", he told officers.

Conferring with Judge Anderson this morning, W. J. McGee, operator of the Possum Run club, said he would see to it that there were no more attacks on caddies or "shakedown" activities.

McGee said previously that he had not known of trouble among the caddies, but would have taken immediate steps to put on end to it if parents of the boys had reported to him.

"We want to keep the boys at work at the club, for they need their earnings," Judge Anderson said.

BREAKS WINDOW

Thief Hurls Brick, Carries Off Radio From Store.

A thief early this morning hurled a brick through a large plate glass window at the W. E. Jones Furniture store, 146 Park avenue west, and carried off a $40 table model radio.

The smashed window was discovered shortly before 5 a. m. today by police while cruising in the vicinity. They said the brick shattered the window and damaged a $500 piano.

Store officials said the piano was badly damaged and would have to be sent back to the factory for repairs. Estimates on the value of the glass window was placed at $100.

Meanwhile, Virgil Kennedy, 329 North Mulberry street, janitor at Bowman school, reported to police that vandals had broken into the school cafeteria and smashed more than 100 dishes. He said it was the second time the building had been broken into in recent weeks.

First Aid Class To Be Started at Richland Camp

A first aid class will be started at the colored CCC camp on the Lucas road next week by Red Cross instructors, according to Harker A. Enlow, director of Red Cross first aid programs.

First aid work has continued this summer with as much interest as is usually displayed in the winter months, Enlow said today. There are six other classes under instruction at the present.

Loyal W. Hartman will be in charge of the class at the CCC camp which will run for three months, with two hours of instructions and demonstrations every Wednesday night at the camp's recreation room.

Other classes include 40 male nurses from three counties, which are being held in Galion; one at the CCC camp near Loudonville; a class for WPA sewing project workers in Mansfield; a Boy Scout class at Shelby, and one for Scout leaders in Mansfield; and a general class which receives instructions at the Red Cross office, West Fourth street.

3 BIDS EXCEED ESTIMATES ON HEDGES SCHOOL

Possibility Looms That New Renovation Program Will Cost More.

With every one of three bids on the remodeling of the Hedges school building exceeding the estimated cost by at least $3,000 it appeared today that the project will cost considerably more than the $8,500 the board of education had figured.

The board opened the bids yesterday afternoon, but deferred the awarding of contracts. It is scheduled to meet again in special session next Monday to determine whether to go ahead with the project and possibly to let the contracts.

The three bids on the general construction work ranged from $11,874, the figure submitted by the Simon Small and Sons company, Mansfield, to $14,500, estimate of Wayde Stevens, Galion contractor. J. W. Ness, Mansfield, submitted the other, asking $11,874 for the work.

Bidders on the plumbing work in the building were the Parkinson company, Mansfield, asking $996; E. F. Malone, Mansfield, $1,587, and the Charles Hoffman company, Mansfield, $527, lowest of the three.

The Richland Electric company, Mansfield, was the only bidder for the electrical work contract. Its figure was $322.

Under the project plans, two class rooms and two cloakrooms on the first floor of the Hedges building would be made into a combined auditorium and gymnasium, seating about 500 persons. Entire cost of the work will be paid by the school board from its general fund.

CAMP LEADER

Raymond Dent Again Chosen as Nelson Dodd Official.

Raymond Dent, teacher at Bowman school, was named yesterday by Ralph B. Chapman, general secretary at the Y. M. C. A., as a leader at the "Y" camp, Camp Nelson Dodd, for the third period which opens Sunday afternoon.

Dent, who was also a leader for the second period which closed last Tuesday, will have charge of archery and singing.

The third period opens Sunday afternoon and continues for one week. Registrations can be made at the "Y" until Saturday noon, Chapman said. Mansfield's quota for this period is 20. Four boys have already signed.

Scout Leader Criticizes P.T.A.

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: As a leader of a Girl Scout Troop I have been able to observe children in relation to their parents.

"I teach those responsibilities that you mention and try to help the child to become a good homemaker. Some children are inspired for a time but then I notice the interest dies out. When I question them as to whether they arranged their rooms differently, or mended an article of clothing, or if they helped with laundering or cooking, the answer is, usually, 'My mother won't let me.'

"When I invite the mothers to special gatherings, the only mothers who attend are the mothers whose children complete the projects. When I discuss responsibilities of children in the home, I find that the parent objects to keeping the child indoors for home duties as their school homework takes up a lot of time and they feel they should have more time outdoors.

Good Citizens.

"I have visited Parent-Teacher Association meetings and the only topics I have heard discussed are: cemetery developments, foundation garments to improve Mother's or Teacher's figure or an educational travelogue talk. Perhaps these are just drawing cards to get the mothers out.

"The mothers and teachers could discuss their problems in relation to home and school and lecturers could analyze and advise. In this way there could be a better understanding between parents and teachers. Perhaps the PTA could arrange to have a study class for children, teaching them responsibilities in the home, helping them to become good citizens and maintaining good characteristics. The home is the place for such guidance, I believe.

Worthy Ideals.

"Scouting teaches a child to be trustworthy, thrifty, to play fair and to be useful in the home and the community. These are truly the foundation of good citizenship.

"Every child should be a Scout, starting from the Cub Pack in Boy Scouts and the Brownies in Girl Scouts. Let's get together and work with youth which seems to be at loose ends today."

I wrote this young lady that I shared her enthusiasm for the Scouts and similar organizations; that while I have learned that all too many P.T.A.'s are such as she described, there are also a good many like the ideal she sets up.

Garden Graph

Morning Glories as Pot Plants.

In Japan morning glories are popular pot plants. The vogue is spreading to this country, and today morning glories are not only used as pot plants on the porch, but are also planted in tubs and trained over wooden or wire supports, thus making decorative terrace material.

When training these plants, wire paper clips can be useful in holding the tips of the plants in position, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. For this purpose the clip should be bent open, and the bottom half straightened out so it can be stuck into the soil like a miniature stake. These wire clips can also be bent to serve as hooks for holding vines which are being trained over supports.

Many people are potting morning glory Scarlet O'Hara, the 1939 Gold Medal winner in the All-American Selections. This new morning glory has magnificent bright, wine-red flowers which liven up a shaded corner of the porch or terrace.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

If anything could have intensified Jack Leslie's rage and humiliation, I knew it would have been Dicky's last gibing speech, revealing that he had been captured by Lillian and me, instead of by two desperate men whom our begrimed faces and Jim's clothing had enabled us to portray.

Before his fierce angry eyes were spread, we knew, the consoling pictures of Mary and Noel delivered into his hands, of Queen Olga's emeralds restored to his possession, and of the capture of my father, the objectives of the venomous international band of conspirators, one part of the hydra-headed monster menacing our institutions whom my father relentlessly had fought through the years.

But I knew that Dicky would let no word drop which would hint our knowledge of the ancient secret on which he counted so heavily. Instead he was stressing our triumph, as if it were the last word in the long and bitterly waged contest between the international gangster's forces and those of my father.

"I think we'll just leave you now," Dicky said, "as soon as I've rolled you over a little way into the thicket. Shut your eyes and I'll tie this scarf over your face. Then the pretty boy won't get his face scratched. You're too heavy to tote or I'd carry you over. Don't worry! You won't smother! I'll take off the scarf as soon as I've got you where I want you."

He had taken Jim's neck scarf from me, and he tied it quickly over Leslie's face. Then rolling him with his foot over the smooth places, and dragging his trussed body across the rough ones, he deposited him in a corner as far as possible from that where the chauffeur lay. Then he stood looking down at him as if puzzled.

"If I were the Chief," he said, as if he were speaking half to himself, "I'd never let this heaven-sent opportunity slip to get you into the farmhouse for the kind of third degree your kind understands. But the Chief's quixotic, I guess, thinks it was one day's good work to get the emeralds and keep Mary and Noel incommunicado. Also he didn't want to risk any slip up on those two items by attempting anything heavier. So I have no instructions concerning you, worse luck!"

He turned away, then went back.

"You're at liberty to get out the best way you can," he said. "But I would suggest waiting to get into the road until we're gone. Our men might come back first, and that would be just too much for you. I'm the Chief's son-in-law, and naturally I obey him implicitly. But Mr. Underwood has greater latitude, and if he saw you the temptation to tuck you under one arm and make a run for goal with you might be just too much for him.

"When we've gone," he went on, "I would advise that you and your man roll yourselves over to the edge of the thicket and stay there until your men come back, as they doubtless will, in search of you."

He turned back to us on the word and burst into laughter again.

"If you two could see yourselves!" he apostrophized. "But where is your car?"

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, July 20.

The lunar transits bearing rule over the affairs of this day are read as adverse, conflicting. While there are indications of pleasant pastimes, with social and sentimental attachments and functions, yet there is a menace of overdoing in this direction, with much self-indulgence and extravagance. Likewise there are aspects showing duplicity, intrigue and underhand methods manifesting in private relations as well as financial.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may have a pleasant year of sociability, romantic attachments and a general good time although there is a regrettable sign of over-indulgence and a disposition to over spend. Finances are also beset by intrigue, connivance and other forms of sharp practice. With wisdom and prudence there are signs of a moderately happy year, but shun strife and recklessness.

A child born on this day may lean toward tempest, stubbornness, and rash and pleasure-loving traits, possibly to excess. It would be wise to begin early with discipline and precept.

—Advice—

Love Reacts Mysteriously

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

There is an unquestionable magic in being in love with a person near at hand. Love has a way of creeping through all the defenses and barricades.

Don't fool yourself by imagining you are indifferent to the person in love with you. You may kid yourself along, but you're bound to think the boy or girl is a person of exceptionally good taste. That's where the magic begins to creep through the barricades, when people are young, emotional and thrown together—we call it propinquity.

This accounts for so much falling in love when youngsters are thrown together in offices, shops, factories. The miracle has come about a million times, and it will happen a million times more.

But the magic of propinquity fails when a man makes a girl too conspicuous by unwelcome attentions; or, contrariwise, when a girl is too affectionate to the boy for whom she has fallen, and makes him the subject of amusement. Nothing brings about a cure for love so quickly as having anyone too gooey or sweet—it's like trying to eat your way through a five-pound box of candy.

When men and women are no longer young, a display of unwanted affection is a horror from which we turn. At the movies, in a bus, train or restaurant, you may have seen a woman trying to hold a vanishing love. Her hand seeks his. The man sits straight as a ramrod, grim endurance in every feature, or he shakes off the unwanted hand without ceremony.

Then there is the couple opposite you in a restaurant. He's decided to break it off, and she has begged to meet him at lunch. He orders cocktails and puts on a "best for you and best for me" expression as she tries desperately to bring back the past by endearments, tasteless to him as cold mutton gravy. Her overheard, "Won't you miss me a little," you'd rather not have heard. The man has a job to get through with, and he wastes scant ceremony over it.

When women break off an outgrown love affair, they're more artistic about it than men. They're not above letting the axe fall at the beginning of a vacation, sparing themselves unpleasant scenes. They may write letters, saying something to the effect that they have discovered how unsuited they are and how much happier he will be with another type of girl, more domestic, more worldly, more intellectual, or whatever kind of "more" will flatter him, and make the break easier.

Outgrown affection is an abhorrence that cannot be borne. But the unspoken love that comes in the morning of life, when a boy begins to wonder why she blushes, and her eyes brighten when she sees him in the elevator, or a girl wonders why he says so tenderly, "Miss Smith, will you take this letter, please," that's the unspoken word that creates magic before which barricades weaken and defenses blow down.

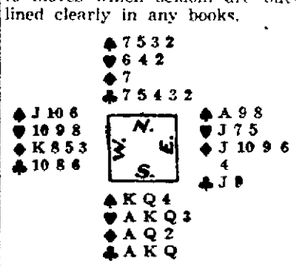
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

IMAGINATION VALUABLE

AMONG THE most valuable qualities at the bridge table, imagination ranks high. The ability to deduce the probabilities of a situation can lead a fine player far away from the cut-and-dried rules which are laid down for the guidance of elementary students, to moves which seldom are outlined clearly in any books.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
2 ♥	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♣	Pass

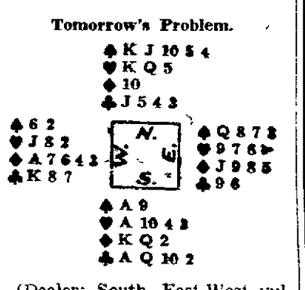
Despite the best of all leads, the diamond J. North had no special trouble making his contract. He refused the diamond finesse, which was virtually marked to lose, in view of the lead, and played for an even break of the outstanding hearts. As a consequence he was able to discard one of his spades on the heart thirteener. By leading spades twice from his own hand, he limited the defenders to one trick, the A.

At the other table of a team game in which this deal was contested, the bidding went exactly the same up to South's call of 3-No Trumps, whereupon everybody passed. East's diamond lead resulted in his side taking four tricks in that suit, plus the spade A, and setting the contract.

Seldom will you find a more striking example in actual play of the value of a long suit as trumps in an otherwise worthless hand, if a strong hand is opposite it. North had real imagination to forsee the advantage of showing his club suit. He was worried when South raised him to slam, but later glad of it.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable).

Against a lead of the diamond 4, how should South play for 3-No Trumps?

NEW SHORT LENGTH

For wear with Summer's short sleeves, the equally short glove is a smart accessory. The "Shortie" is usually made of chamois or doeskin type leather in white or natural and the popular high colors. The glove stops just at the wristbone and is fastened with a pearl or brass button, sometimes at the back and sometimes at the base of the palm. The "shortie," particularly when handstitched, is an excellent complement for short sleeved Summer suits.

The first medical school in America was established in Philadelphia in 1751.

Exhibits New Synthetic Rubber Tire Here

Fred Holl, manager of the Goodrich Silvertown store, 47 East Fourth street, (left) explains to John G. Routzon, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce (center) and Mayor W. J. Locke (right) the merits of the new Goodrich tire made of synthetic rubber, called Ameripol. Ameripol, according to Holl, is made entirely of products available in the United States. For years, experiments have been conducted to develop synthetic rubber from which tires can be made in the event foreign rubber supplies are cut off from the United States. At present, 90 per cent of the rubber used here comes from the East Indies, control of which is now threatened. They are owned primarily by the Dutch and British. The new Ameripol tires are not available commercially, but engineers feel they can step up production enough to made a sufficient number of tires available.

GRAND JURY TO MEET JULY 30, MARRIOTT SAYS

Prosecutor Lists 16 Cases To Be Investigated During Regular Session.

Back from a vacation in Canada, Prosecutor G. W. Marriott said today the Richland county grand jury will be called into session Tuesday, July 30, to hear at least 16 cases.

It will be the first grand jury session in recent months and the jurors will study the county's first murder case in more than a year.

The murder charge is against Albert Davis, 35, colored, accused of fatally stabbing Mrs. Lena Morton, 34, also colored, in her bedroom at 244½ North Mulberry street on June 18. Davis has been held in the county jail without bond since the slaying.

Eleven of the defendants whose cases will go before the jury are in the county. Three are free under bond, while the other two cases will be submitted to the jury secretly.

In addition to Davis, the defendants whose cases will be studied are:

Jerry Wilt, Ashland, accused of intent to defraud a fireworks company; Clarence Ruckman and Charles Ruckman, both of Shelby, receiving stolen property; Virginia Pahl, Detroit, and Dick Eby, Marion, forgery; Howard G. French, Mansfield, carrying concealed weapons; James Foster, Mansfield, rape.

Clifford Nixon, Fred DeWeese and Maynard Stover, all of Mansfield, non support; Jesse L. Baith, Mansfield, breaking and entering; Alford Firestone, Indianapolis, operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent; J. M. Garaigan, Dayton, issuing a check without funds.

Women college graduates did not suffer seriously from unemployment during the depression, a survey shows.

THEATERS

Top Feature Booked.

The Madison will present one of the season's important pictures for four days, starting tomorrow. It is the film version of Rachel Crothers' stage hit, "Susan and God," with Joan Crawford in the role of the religious fadist and Fredric March as the imbibing husband who tries to remain human during his wife's spiritual spree. Important roles are handled by Ruth Hussey, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth and Rita Quigley, the adolescent daughter who was the victim of both parents. Richard Arlen and Andy Divine in "Black Diamonds" is also booked.

Crowd at Prevue.

More than a thousand movie followers attended the preview of "All This And Heaven Too" presented at the Ohio theater last night. The picture returns to the theater tomorrow for its regular run.

Those who had read Rachel Field's dramatic and stirring story, which is said to be the story of her grandmother, and those who had not, alike were impressed with the Bette Davis portrayal of the French governess and that of Charles Boyer, the French nobleman who is driven to murder by the passions and jealousies of his wife. Both, it was felt, represent motion picture dramatic art at its best.

The picture has been made with great fidelity to the first half of the book, that which deals with Mam'selle's entry into the home of the Duc and the Duchesse and the events that led up to the tragedy. The American sequence is merely touched on, both as a prologue and an epilogue to the story proper.

The popular novel and the combination of two top ranking stars brought out the largest preview crowd to see a picture in Mansfield since the premiere here a year ago of Bromfield's "The Rains Came."

Gay Caballero.

Further adventures of the Cisco Kid are recounted in "Viva Cisco Kid", with Cesar Romero as the dashing and daring caballero whose love affairs were as numerous as the sands of the desert. This time he is through with women—until he rescues a pretty girl in a stage hold up. The girl is Jean Rogers. The film is at the Ritz, along with "3 Cheers For The Irish," which features Priscilla Lane, Dennis Morgan and Thomas Mitchell.

Love Starts It.

In "Love, Honor, and Oh-Baby," Donald Woods, plays a novelist who is so sorrowful at being jilted he hires gangsters to bump him off and thereby launches a series of hair-raising events. Mona Barrie and Kathryn Adams are his aids. "Pinto Canyon" brings Bob Steele to the Majestic today and tomorrow in one of his typical Western action stories.

A Love Story.

Ingrid Bergman, a lovely Swedish actress who made one appearance in an American film and then disappeared, is starred with Leslie Howard in "Intermezzo: A Love Story" at the Park. It is the drama of two people who found they could not build their own happiness on the heartbreak of others. "Missing Evidence" with Preston Foster and Irene Hervey, is the second feature.
